Cowboys' QB woes continue

IRVING, Texas (AP)—Dallas Cowboys quarterback Anthony Wright did not practice Wednesday because of fluid on his right knee, and coach Dave Campo indicated that Wright might not play Sunday.

Wright expected to have results of an MRI on Thursday, and Campo said he would not make a final decision on the quarterback's playing status for the Arizona game until after that. Wright has started three of five games in place of injured rookie Quincy Carter.

Campo said Clint Stoerner would start ahead of Ryan Leaf, the former No. 2 overall pick the Cowboys signed Oct. 12, if Wright is not ready to play Sunday.

"Clint understands the offense, and knows what we are trying to get accomplished," Campo said. "At this point if Anthony can not go, I don't see that changing before the end of the week."

Stoerner, a second-year player from Arkansas, has never started in the NFL. He has played in only three games, completing 4-of-7 passes for 44 yards and two touchdowns in his two appearances this season.

Dallas was prepared to sign Leaf then, but he failed a physical because of a wrist problem. His second chance with the Cowboys came after Carter tore his left hamstring at Oakland on Oct. 7.

Campo said there was a good chance that Leaf could play for the Cowboys on Sunday.

"I feel comfortable that Ryan can do everything we're asking him to do," Campo said. "The wrist isn't a factor now. But we haven't gone through a crisis, he hasn't been on the field yet."

After the Cowboys' 9-7 win over Washington on Oct. 15, Wright had some swelling in the knee and did not take part in the team's only two practices before having last weekend off.

BIG 12

In each of the last 38 meetings between the two schools, at least one team has been ranked. In 34 of the 38, one of the two teams was in The Associated Press top 10.

The Sooners' 31-14 win last season snapped a Nebraska series-long, seven-game winning streak.

The Huskers hold the nation's longest Division A home winning streak at 19 games, and slightly are favored in the contest. Meanwhile, OU is 10-1 against ranked teams under head coach Bob Stoops. The Sooners also hold a 20-game winning streak and have not lost to a team ranked in the top 10 in its last eight attempts. Something will have to give when the two powerhouse collide at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Something in the water

The University of Missouri may have the best 1-2 punch of linebackers in the nation in Sean Doyle and Jamonte Robinson.

Combined, the duo average 25.3 stops per game, and both are in the top five in the conference in tackles.

Doyle, who recorded 16 tackles against Iowa State on Oct. 13, is No. 2 in the conference, while Robinson comes in fifth. Robinson also had a solid performance against the Cyclones, piling up a career-high 18 tackles.

Janes, Rose, freshman Dan Blanchard and senior Pat Kennedy combined to set the Missouri pool record by nearly two seconds.

"That was the best swim of the weekend," Nash said. "They were four guys who were almost toast by the time they got there, but saw what the pool record was, thought they could take a run at it, and this is a record from (a pool) that has had conference championships there."

The A&M women's team also traveled to Missouri, placing fourth out of five schools in the relays, one point behind the University of Kansas for third place.

The women lost their dual meet to Missouri 191.5 to 108.5.

The numbers could be deceiving this early in the year, however, with many new swimmers adding to the mix. The A&M women's team added 13 freshmen to this year's team, as well as two transfers.

Two bright spots during the dual meet for the women were senior All-American Clara Ho and freshmen Tiffany Moore. Ho won two events, the 100- and 200-yard butterfly, while Moore took gold in the 1000-yard freestyle.

Both teams look to continue winning today. For the men's team, this meet is a chance to carry its momentum from last weekend's relays. For the women, it will be an opportunity to get back to last season's winning ways.
