Keys evacuated

Meteorologists warn Michelle likely to hit Islam

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Keys were ordered evacuated Sunday as meteorologists warned that the chain of islands likely would be brushed by Hurricane Michelle. Rain spread into the state as the eye of the hurricane blasted down on the south coast of Cuba.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami issued a hurricane warning for all of the Florida Keys, projecting that winds of 75 mph or more could reach the area Sunday and remain into Monday. Gusts, up to 52 mph in Soberly Key, and heavy surf were already pounding the area's beaches.

Bennie Sweeney, who owns a Key West T-shirt shop, opened his store but only to prepare for the storm. Sweeney said he was going to hang a picture of a rabbi on the window.

"We went to the synagogue, we prayed. We came here just to make sure nothing happens," Sweeney said.

Monroe County officials ordered a mandatory evacuation for all the Keys early Sunday and Miami-Dade County officials ordered the evacuation of a portion of the county. Public schools in both counties will be closed Monday.

The evacuation orders came a day after Gov. Jeb Bush declared a state of emergency. "It appears that the storm has veered to the east, thankfully," Bush said Sunday. But, "It's still a very powerful storm ... clearly there's going to be some impact."

Heavy bands of rain with tropical storm force winds, which range from 39-to-73 mph, were spreading across the Florida Straits and the Keys, and were moving toward the southeast coast of Florida.

Michelle made landfall around 4 p.m. EST on Cuba's southern coast, about 70 miles southeast of Havana. It was moving northeast, putting Cuba's premier vacation resort, Varadero, near its path.

The center of Michelle should pass over Cuba by midnight Sunday and head into the eastern Florida Straits, said Ed

Rappaport, deputy director of National Hurricane Center.

Up until Monday afternoon parts of the Keys and Florida will experience periods of heavy rains and winds, with the hurricane's east approach to the state said Rappaport.

Rumsfeld: Taliban faltering

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — After four weeks of U.S. attacks, Afghanistan's ruling Taliban are no longer "functioning as a government," Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said Sunday. But an opposition attack on a key northern city was reported faltering only hours after it was launched.

That raised doubts whether the factious, poorly armed northern alliance opposition could exploit U.S. airstrikes and topple the Taliban without the assistance of American ground troops.

Meanwhile, U.S. jets struck the front line about 30 miles north of Kabul, according to Atiqullah Baryalai, deputy defense minister of the northern alliance. In the Afghan capital itself, American bombs hit near the Intercontinental Hotel, set on a hill in the southwest part of the city.

They also struck the northeast town of Taloqan, which the opposition lost to the Taliban last year.

Rumsfeld, on a tour of front line states in the war against terrorism, sought to dispel fears that the air campaign, now in its fifth week, was failing to crack the Taliban's grip on Afghanistan.

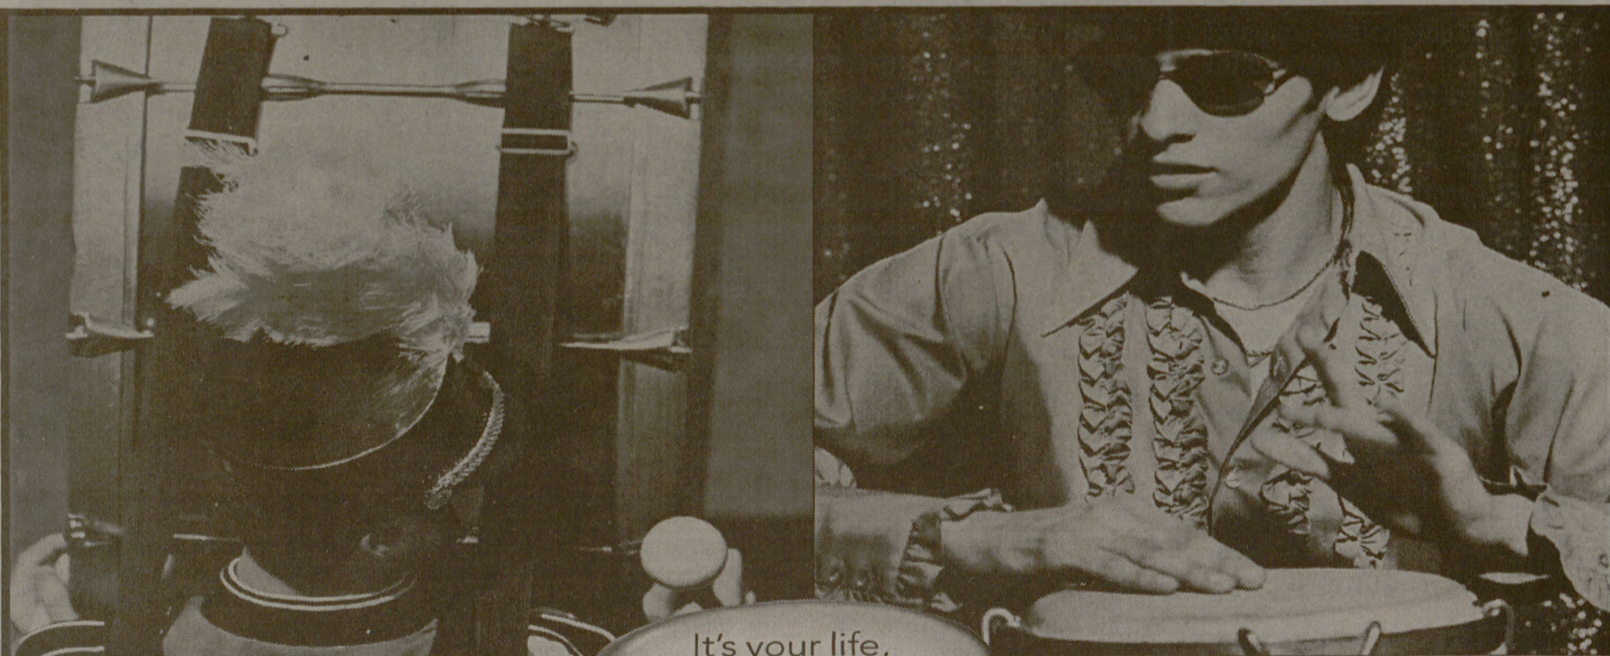

"The Taliban (are) not really functioning as a government," Rumsfeld declared after meeting Pakistani President Gen. Pervez Musharraf, a Muslim ally in the anti-terrorism campaign.

Rumsfeld, who went on to India later Sunday, said the Taliban were "using their power enclaves throughout the country" and were making major military moves.

"They are pretty much in static positions," said Rumsfeld said the Islamic militia was using mosques as command centers and as ammunition storage sites to spare them from American attacks and "actively lying about civilian casualties."

Earlier Sunday, in Uzbekistan, Rumsfeld gave an assessment of the military campaign's success to date. "The effort to deal with the terrorist networks is proceeding," Rumsfeld said. "It is, we believe, proceeding at a pace that is showing measurable progress."

A key element of the U.S. strategy has been to attack Taliban positions facing the northern alliance — especially on the front north of Kabul and on positions defending the Taliban-held city of Mazar-e-Sharif.
