THE BATTALION

YOUNG

The departure of Jamaal Gilchrist after last season left the Aggies without a true point guard. A&M brought in two junior college transfers to handle the point.

Michael Gardener and Bradley Jackson are both expected to play at the point guard position, which will move senior Andy Leatherman into his natural position of shooting guard.

The Aggies added a freshman who is expected to make waves. Daryl Mason from Bryan led his team to the Class 5A state championship game last season.

"We think all three of those young men are going to contribute," Watkins said. "To some degree, I think the season will tell us a little bit as we get into it. But surely the point guard was one of our needs and we addressed it by bringing two players in and they have been very competitive."

The Aggies return two of their big men after missing them last season. Sophomore forward Tomas Ressa, listed at 7-foot tall, returns after missing the majority of last season with a staph infection.

Sophomore center Andy Slocum returns after missing the season because of surgery.

Slocum, who has bulked up to 280 pounds, will give the Aggies an inside presence they have been lacking.

Sophomores Jesse King and Nick Anderson along with junior Keith Bean look to improve on solid first seasons at A&M and give Watkins a versatile mix of players who can start or come off the bench.

"This year, I think we can now start showing what this program is going to become," Watkins said. "We've got the compliment of players now. We do have some that may be still young, but I think because we will be able to substitute and go to our bench, we'll be able to come up with some strategies that we haven't been able to in the past."

The Aggies begin regular season play Nov. 19 when they host George Washington University.

196, and steals, 107. At post, the Aggies return 28-game starter Lynn Classen, who underwent knee surgery during the off season.

Sophomore forward Janae Derrick, who started sporadically for the Aggies last season, will also return to the A&M squad. The Trotwood, Ohio native started for the Aggies the last 16 games of the season and had double-digit scoring outputs during four of those games.

Junior forward Meg Banahan will look to make a mark for the Aggies after sitting out most of last year with a knee injury.

"[Meg] is playing a whole new position this year," Gillom said. "She always came in and gave us instant enthusiasm, and she played hard in everything she did."

On Jan. 17 against Oklahoma, Banahan, who was a force for the Aggies off the bench, tore the anterior cruciate ligament in her left knee.

"I haven't played since January, so just getting back out there with the intensity is important," Banahan said. "It feels good so far."

Senior Celeria Washington should see considerable playing time at the post position. The 6-foot-2-inch Karnack, Texas, native missed most of the 2000-2001 season with a back injury, but played the final 19 games of the season.

"Our defense is going to win us a lot of games," Gillom said. "[Offensively] we just have to feel comfortable with ourselves and get used to playing with each other."
