tore down the goal posts and students who were involved in altercations after the game.

"It's going to be easier on the ones who self-report," Rugeley said. "They feel pretty lousy. Things just got out of hand."

Sowder said the Tech police report came to his office unsolicited.

"I never ask for things like that," Sowder said. "They brought it over here on their own accord, mainly to have someone review the circumstances to decide if any criminal charges need to be filed."

The report, which Sowder provided Wednesday, states that Wallace saw A&M and Tech fans fighting and attempted to stop the fights.

"He was trying to help people back into the stands when [McKinney] shoved him. [Wallace] stated that he tried to explain to [McKinney] that he was an A&M student, but [McKinney] struck him with a pair of binoculars. [Wallace] got angry and punched [McKinney] in the eye," the report stated.

Rugeley said university policy dictates that investigations of this nature be given to a magistrate, and reports that McKinney was hit by an A&M student had no bearing on Tech's decision to give the report to Sowder.

"We were going to do it regardless," Rugeley said. "We have a long-standing policy to present these to the district attorney's office."

Rugeley said Tech officials are making changes to security policies before next weekend's game against the University of Oklahoma in Lubbock.

"We don't have to be hit in the face twice with a wet mop," Rugeley said.

Hard work for humanity

Rafael Ferre, a third-year medical student, and Clinton Bates, a freshman management information systems major, nail shingles to the roof of a Habitat for Humanity house Wednesday. The volunteer program has been branching out to College Station and is building five homes in the area near Holleman Drive. The low-cost homes are built for local families by volunteers.

one sheet of paper inside. An environmental service worker handled the letter with gloves, sealed it in a bag and sealed that bag inside a larger bag, Helton said. U.S. postal inspectors will examine the letter and its contents when they have time, he said.

If the package tests negative for anthrax spores, postal inspectors will dispose of the letter, but Helton said it is likely they will not test it for anthrax.

Helton said despite the validity of precautionary measures, people have a tendency to overreact. Environmental services responded to the call from the Office of the State Chemist with caution, Helton said, but didn't need to evacuate the building or approach the letter with HAZMAT suits.

that representatives now say has the support of the Student Body President Schuyler House may take the form of a student body referendum reinforcing the student body's views on the possibility of a Bonfire in 2002.

In other business, the assembly passed a resolution that calls for RHA delegates to promote the singing of both verses of the Aggie Hymn instead of singing the second verse.

The resolution passed with 35 votes to 32. Carrie Edstrom, junior political science major and Residence Life Staff Council member, RHA, said Yell Leader Sam Siedel wrote a letter of dissent, saying that singing the verse of the War Hymn is not the University tradition.

third in goals. She was OU's only All-Big 12 selection.

Johnson's 13 goals tie her with Jamie Csizmadia for the A&M freshman record. Any goal she scores in the Big 12 tournament will count in season statistics, so she could break Csizmadia's record in tonight's game.

"I was excited to do it (tying Csizmadia), but it is not everything," Johnson said. "What matters to me is the team, how well we have done and just getting the ball in the net, whoever puts it in."

Johnson was named to the Big 12 All-

Newcomer Team along with freshman defender Shannon Labhart and freshman midfielder Amanda Burke.

While Johnson has had a solid year, it is senior forward Nicky Thrasher who appears to lead the Aggies.

Thrasher has scored five goals in the last two games and has scored 11 of her 14 goals in Big 12 games. She is tied for the Big 12 lead in goals with Big 12 Player of the Year Christine Latham of Nebraska.

"After the Nebraska game, the past five games have been incredible," Thrasher said. "Our defensive pressure all over the field was great, and we are getting more goals and more goals off of that."

After the 4-2 loss to No. 12 Nebraska,

A&M outscored its next five opponents combined score of 22-3.

Thrasher was named to the All-Big 12 Conference first team along with more midfielder Kristen Strutz.

"For years we have been able to keep the pace of games and we have been able to get a big time goal scorer and we have been able to get a big time defender," Guernsey said. "Nicky and Linsey are both just dynamite."

The winner of the A&M-OU game will advance to a second round match-up against the winner of today's Nebraska-Baylor game.

Today's other first round games are No. 14 Texas against Iowa State and Kansas against Missouri.
