Ags take on Jayhawks

STUART VILLANUEVA • THE BATTALION

Senior outside hitter Brandi Mount digs a ball against Iowa State Saturday at G. Rollie White Coliseum. Mount and the No. 13 Texas A&M volleyball team will host the University of Kansas Jayhawks Wednesday night. The Aggies are 20-4 on the season and are in second place in the Big 12.

Simms debating draft

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas quarterback Chris Simms, who said last summer it would be "ludicrous" to consider turning pro after this season, said Tuesday night he plans to think about entering the draft.

"I think it would be stupid for me not to listen to a few opinions here and there and hear what people have to say," said Simms, who has a school-record 22 touchdown passes with one game left for the No. 5 Longhorns (9-1).

"I'm not saying I'm going to come out, or anything like that, but I'm definitely going to listen to what people say."

Simms, a junior, said he would have to consider all options for his future should he finish the season strong. Any decision would likely be made in consultation with his father, former Super Bowl MVP Phil Simms, now an NFL broadcaster.

"If I do come back, I'll at least hear what people had to say about me, where I need to improve in my game," Simms said. "But I'm definitely going to leave that door open."

Simms was on many Heisman Trophy watch lists when the season started and appeared on the cover of several national magazines. The hype faded with a slow start and all but stopped with four interceptions in a 14-3 loss to Oklahoma.

He since has rebounded with 16 touchdown passes in Texas' five-game winning streak. Simms has passed for 2,335 yards with eight interceptions.

In the summer, Simms rejected speculation that he would turn pro after this season. At the time, he had only six games and was emerging from a battle starting job with Applewhite.

"That's ludicrous," he said. "I had the greatest year of my life. I had the greatest year of my life. I had the greatest year of my life. I had the greatest year of my life."

The Longhorns closed their regular season Nov. 23 against Texas A&M. With a victory over the Aggies, Texas could earn a bid to a Bowl Championship Series game.

Simms said he has talked with coach Mack Brown about any pro possibilities.

"It's not really the time now I don't think," Simms said. "I guess we'll have time to talk about it."
