THE BATTALION

CHEER

for the better of the diversity of the school," she said.

University spokeswoman Cynthia Lawson said administrators decided the word "Aggie' cannot remain in the organization's name. Lawson said she was unsure whether the organization will be allowed to stay affiliated with the University.

When the squad formed in September, students and alumni began voicing concerns that the squad would take the place of yell leaders and try to perform at games. Johnson said the organization complied with a request to amend its constitution to say the squad would not cheer at athletic events - mainly football games.

Johnson said she was disappointed in the student body's reaction to the squad, referring to T-shirts that read "No cheerleaders."

She said the opposition will disappear once people see the purpose of the squad is to not cheer at athletic events, but just to compete.

Students have expressed concerns that the cheer squad, though designed for competition, may want to cheer at games in the future, something which goes against the Aggie all-male yell leader tradition.

"We are disappointed in our fellow Aggies who chose not to support us because they are stuck in a world of anti-change," Johnson said. "I thought one of the best reasons to be an Aggie was because Aggies always support each other. I guess I was wrong.'

hazing, will undoubtedly reflect the same views and ideals of the 'zero tolerance' [policy] which are held by the Corps of Cadets," Voelkel said.

The Fish Drill Team, created in 1946 by a group of freshmen cadets, competes in precision drill competitions across the country. The team is famous among cadets for its long practices, intense and strict discipline, and long runs that test the endurance of the fittest freshmen.

On Nov. 6, eight other students where chosen as advisers. Junior cadets Arthur Soloman, a recreation, park and tourism sciences major, and James Stegin, a physics major; sophomore cadets Ross Clark, a agricultural science major; Thomas Felts, a geology major; John Linn, a history major; Joseph Sanchez, a political science major and Michael Tillis, an agricultural development major, will lead the reactivation of the Fish Drill Team in the spring. Patrick Green, a political science major was selected as
