Holy Land Foundation's assets frozen, offices raided

RICHARDSON (AP) — The leader of a large Muslim charity attended a mid-1990s event where $207,000 was raised for Hamas and the keynote speaker urged the crowd to "finish off the Israelis; kill them all," according to an FBI memo.

The memo also detailed 1993 meetings between officials of the militant Palestinian group and the charity, the Texas-based Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development, to discuss fund-raising for the families of suicide bombers.

The Treasury Department used the FBI memo as grounds to freeze Holy Land's assets and raid its offices this week. Holy Land officials denied the government's accusation that they funneled money to terrorists and promised to fight the freeze.

Several prominent American Muslim groups called on President Bush to unfreeze Holy Land's assets and said shutting down the foundation would damage America's credibility with Muslims around the world and raise the spectre of a government attack on Islam.

Working closely with Israeli intelligence, FBI investigators concluded in a 49-page report that Holy Land leaders were Hamas members and the charity was the primary U.S. fund-raising organ for the terrorist group.

The memo cited a previously disclosed $210,000 donation to Holy Land from Mousa Abu Marzook, later identified by Israeli officials as a Hamas political leader now in Syria, said Marzook designated Holy Land as Hamas' main U.S. fund-raising arm.

The memo cites an informant who described a conference of the Muslim Arab Youth Association at a Los Angeles hotel from Dec. 30, 1994, to Jan. 2, 1995. The informant said Holy Land President Shukri Abu Baker, introduced at an earlier meeting as a Hamas official, attended the Los Angeles session.

At the same conference, an informant said, Steve Muhammed Siyam, described as head of operations for the Hamas military wing, gave a keynote address.

Former officer arrested on charge of assaulting teenager

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — A former Marshall police officer is charged with violating his probation and sexually assaulting a teenage boy.

Gerald Wayne Graves was sentenced to 10 years probation in 1992 after he was accused of seducing two teenage boys with the promise of cruising, drinking beer and fixing tickets, court records show.

Graves was fired. He pleaded guilty to sexual assault in November 1992 and was sentenced to 10 years of probation. He was also required to register as a sex offender.

Court records show his victims and their families agreed to the sentence, wanting to avoid the embarrassment of a trial.

On Monday, Graves was again accused of sexually assaulting a 16-year-old boy, and Harrison County sheriff's investigators are examining his computer, believing he has used it to contact other young men.

Graves, 46, of Waskom, is being held without bond in the Harrison County Jail.

Investigators have not released many details of the latest charges against Graves, but deputies are looking to see if he had other victims. Harrison County District Attorney Rick Bert told the Longview News-Journal.

Authorities say that in 1992, Graves approached two teens who were ticketed by another officer for driving violations.

The officer and teens, riding in Graves' personal Chevrolet Suburban, bought beer and drove around Marshall before going to a Longview Hotel, where police say Graves assaulted the boys.

Police said some of the tickets against the boys had been dropped.
