Brownsville man confesses to 26 slayings after two decades in prison

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A man convicted in six more than two decades ago confessed to 26 other slayings he was arrested on drug charges.

Juan Martin Cantu, who served time in Texas and Michigan, told investigators he was a person from Vera Cruz, Mexico. Cantu made the confession in a taped interview after his arrest Wednesday for felony drug possession.

"He sat down with me and me that he started to kill people when he was 14," Cameron County Constable's investigator Gavito said. "He kind of took all behind him and wanted to get off his chest. I was here to help Cantu, who uses at least 10 aliases, is the son of a poor farmer in the small Mexican state of Morelos. His first victim was apparently threatened his brother.

By 17, he became a professional murderer, he said.

"I asked him, 'Do you get this, get a joy from it?' He smiles and he tells me, 'You know it gives me a thrill,'" Gavito said.

Cantu, 46, was being detained by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and prosecuted for illegal entry.

Cantu was sentenced in 1978 for 1978 murders and transferred in 1980 to a Mexican prison under a bi-national treaty signed by the Carter administration. Mexican authorities released Cantu in 1984, Gavito said.
