always surrounded friends. Paige Mixon part of a close-knit group of friends she had known since elementary school called themselves "The Crew," her mother said.

"The closeness of group was rather unique," Penny Mixon said. "We were silly together, laughed all the time."

One close friend, Ben Jo Dodson, a sophomore biochemistry major, Mixon was a great friend. "She was funny, nice, honest," Dodson said.

"I could always count on her to tell me exactly what she thought," Dodson said. Mixon had recently changed her major from medical science to economics and was a member of Student Senate Judiciary Court.

"She wanted to be Supreme Court justice one day," Dodson said. Dodson said Paige's favorite drink was Mountain Dew, never finished a can.

"She didn't like it if the soda got warm, so I never finished a can," Dodson said. "I will see another Mountain Dew can and not think of her."

John Mixon, Paige's father, said his daughter loved to read; Dean Knafl's novels were her favorites, also loved movies, music was fond of her pets.

"Paige loved animals," John Mixon said. "Our family has always had dogs, cats and Paige spent a lot of time with each of them. She was home."

Penny Mixon said her middle daughter, her family and bridge gap between her two sisters, Brooke, 22, and Shelly, 20. "A friend of ours said girls were a sandwich. Paige was the meat," Mixon said.

Penny said she Texas A&M and was determined to attend there that she did not go to other schools.

"She decided that is she wanted to go and even want to have scores sent anywhere," Penny Mixon said, never knew exactly who was that made her so determined, but she always A&M."

Dodson said Mixon glad to be an Aggie, always appreciated things the University of its students, like Silver Taps.

"Paige attended Silver Taps a couple of times," Dodson said. "She was glad the University had something like that and it's students and said that day she wanted her increasing remembered and other outlets like that."

Mixon's father said varied family will miss sharing the lives with her.
