Alleged shoe bomber charged with 8 counts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government filed an indictment in federal court in Boston Wednesday charging alleged shoe bomber Richard Reid with eight counts, including attempted use of a weapon of mass destruction and attempted murder.

REID

The charges, which came the day after the federal government filed a host of charges against American-Taliban John Walker Lindh, were handed up by a federal grand jury. Reid has been held since the December incident in Plymouth, Mass.

A 12-page indictment alleges that Reid received training from al-Qaida in Afghanistan and attempted to kill the passengers on American Airlines Flight 63 from Paris to Miami on Dec. 22.

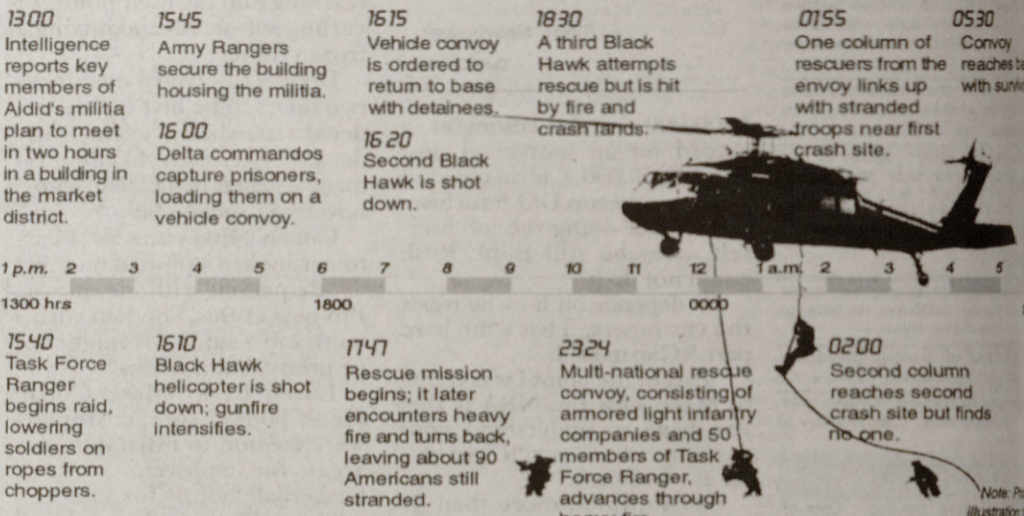

"Richard Reid did attempt to use a weapon of mass destruction, consisting of an explosive placed in each of his shoes," against American said the 12-page indictment.

One U.S. official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said that Reid may be an al-Qaida target scout known as "Abdul Ra'uff." Reid's travels match those of an al-Qaida operative known as Abdul Ra'uff, which are listed in a computer obtained in Afghanistan by a Street Journal reporter. The similarities in Reid's movements in Europe and the Middle East have led investigators to suspect they are the same person.

Reid converted to Islam while in prison on petty crimes. He later worshipped at the south London mosque as Zacarias Mousa and charged with conspiracy in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Remembering 17 hours and two Black Hawks down

In the early 1990s, thousands of Somalis were starving to death as incoming aid was confiscated by competing warlords. Mogadishu, the dangerous capital, became the focus of a military action by U.N. and U.S. forces who sought to capture the most troublesome warlord, Mohammed Farah Aidid, and his militia. In a raid on Oct. 3-4, 1993, 18 Americans and hundreds of Somalis were killed.
