Barton

Barton said. In addition to lowering income tax rates across the board, Barton said he wants to eliminate the estate tax. Although the government is spending more to fight the war on terrorism, Barton said the increased revenue generated by a growing economy will head off budget deficits.

One of the district's most pressing problems is inadequate transportation infrastructure, and Barton said he would ask to be placed on the transportation committee, where he will be in a strong position to fight for central Texas' fair share of transportation infrastructure funding. Bryan-College Station needs a four lane divided highway linking it to major traffic hubs, and alternative routes are needed in the Austin area to relieve the congestion on Interstate 35, Barton said.

Although he resided in College Station for only four years as a child, Barton said he understands the needs of rural and suburban areas like the District 31 and feels at home in small town Texas.

Barton, the son of Congressman Joe Barton, represented Brazos County in the 1980s, said his family will help him be an effective advocate for the district's interests despite his lack of seniority.

"I can make an impact day 1," Barton said. "I have strong relationships with Washington and I know what it takes to be a great representative."

The Stirred Air-Flow Test costs much less than the apparatus currently in use and test time is cut in half, Glover said.

"It is robust, easy to use and compact in space," Glover said.

Glover worked on the project from Sept. to Aug. 2001, with the help of Interim Professor Dr. Richard Davison and graduate student Nikolai Vassiliev. Five prototypes of the apparatus were delivered to different laboratories and are being tested to compare results.

Peterson said, "Indications are right now it is going to work really well for us. TxDOT
