impressive winning, 6-2, 6-2, over the Hawkeyes' Steffi Hoch. After suffering a tough loss on Sunday, Karlikova was excited to get the win Wednesday night.

"[Karlikova] played very well tonight," Kleinecke said. "She played well last week but came up just short. It was nice for her to play well and get the win." "I started the match off well," Karlikova said. "Toward the end [Hoch] played well and it was a tough finish, but I was glad to get the win.

Nedorostova, Hedberg and Spencer also won their matches to give the Aggies the 6-1 win. The one loss came on court No. 3 as Terburgh dropped her match to Iowa sophomore Cassie Haas, who transferred from A&M to be closer to her family in Iowa, Haas was the recipient of the Aggie Heart Award in her lone season at A&M.

Haas said that even though it was just another match, it was still very important to her to play at A&M again. "I've been thinking about this all year," Haas said. "I have been looking at this match on the schedule and to get the win here was huge. It was great to be back in Aggieland and see all of my friends.

"I was pleased with how well [Haas] played," said Iowa head coach Paul Wardlaw. "[Haas] had a nice homecoming tonight and she was one reason we scheduled this match with A&M." The Aggies next home match will be at 6 p.m. Friday at the Varsity Tennis Center against the Tulsa Golden Hurricane.

Yankees

"We have to compete against them, and I'm sure we will. But there isn't a team that has the resources to compete with the Yankees.'

Of course, that did not stop the San Francisco Giants from spending $90 million to keep home run king Barry Bonds. His beyond-belief 73 homers, by the way, were nearly as hard to fathom as his kooky feud with Sammy Sosa.

The wild-card St. Louis Cardinals spent freely, signing Tino Martinez and Jason Isringhausen. AL MVP Ichiro Suzuki and the record-breaking Seattle Mariners also improved themselves, picking up Jeff Cirillo.

Oakland and Houston, which now plays at Astros Field rather than Enron Field, both boast outstanding young pitching that put them in the playoffs last year.

AL Central champion Cleveland can count on its young ace, Bartolo Colon wait a second, he is 28 instead of 26 after getting caught in an age discrepancy. No matter, he will start for the Indians in this year's major league opener March 31 at Anaheim.

And do not forget the current kings of the hill, World Series co-MVPs Randy Johnson and Curt Schilling and their Diamondbacks.

At 38, Johnson is coming off a season in which he beat out Schilling for his fourth Cy Young Award.

"My age is the age that I am and I'm pitching the way I am," the Big Unit said. "There's no rhyme nor reason except that I've worked extremely hard and I take a lot of pride in what I do."

One thing the players and owners definitely must do: reach a labor agreement to avoid yet another devastating strike or lockout.

So far, no deal. Certainly not after management tried to get rid of the Expos and Minnesota Twins November, while the glow of a glorious World Series was still bright.

And it was not a good sign when Paul Beeston, the game's chief operating officer and a person the players trusted, recently resigned.

"There has been a step backward since June," said Gene Orza, the No. 2 official at the players' union. "I think it's in large measure why Paul's not with us anymore.'

Dynamic duo

The combination of aces Randy Johnson and Curt Schilling were the top pitchers in the National League last season.
