anonymity, said Arafat ordered the arrest of four key militants from the Islamic militant groups Hamas and Islamic Jihad as well as from the Al Aqsa Martyrs' Brigade, a militia linked to Arafat's Fatah movement.

The explosion occurred at about 7:20 p.m. Wednesday, as dozens of guests in the Park Hotel along Netanya's boardwalk settled down for the Passover Seder in the dining hall. Guests were dressed in their holiday best; the women in festive dresses, the men in white shirts and dark pants.

The bomber, carrying a large bag of explosives, made his way past an armed guard at the hotel entrance who did not consider him suspicious, Israel TV said. From the lobby, he ran toward the dining hall, where he blew himself up.

Some of the wounded staggered out of the lobby, which was plunged into darkness by the explosion. Others were taken to ambulances in stretchers, including a young boy who had an oxygen mask pressed to the face.

One man was covered by a blue blanket, blood dripping from his face. An elderly woman, her face covered with blood, sat on the sidewalk, attended to by several people. Witnesses said they saw five bodies lined up on the pavement, some of them dismembered, including that of a woman in festive holiday clothes.

"They attacked innocent Israelis on one of the most sacred nights to Jewish people, Passover," said Meir, the Israeli government spokesperson.

Israeli police had been on high alert for possible attacks during the weeklong Passover holiday, with more than 10,000 officers deployed in potential trouble spots.

The country's police commissioner, Shlomo Aharonishki, said it was impossible to prevent all attacks. "Even with more policemen and a broader deployment, we cannot block the centers of the cities," Aharonishki said.

Israel has said repeatedly it cannot tolerate more attacks on its civilians. Earlier this week, Sharon convened his security Cabinet to discuss possible options in the event the truce mission fails. One idea raised was a large-scale military operation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israel has held Arafat responsible for the string of recent attacks, saying he has done nothing to rein in militants. Raanan Gissin, a Sharon adviser, said the attack in Netanya "will require us to reevaluate our overall policy."

"We are still working to achieve a cease-fire to which we are fully committed, but if the Palestinians have decided to choose the road of terrorism... then we have to decide what measures we will take," Gissin said.

The bombing came just hours after Saudi Crown Prince Abdullah presented a new peace initiative at the Arab summit in Beirut, offering Israel normal relations with the Arab world in exchange for a complete withdrawal from the territories it occupied in the 1967 Mideast war.

Arafat, who remains confined to the West Bank by Israel, embraced the initiative in a televised speech, and said he hoped it would be adopted by the summit.

because they watch me and want to play just like me," he said. After disagreeing with some of the decisions made by the public school system, Grimaldo decided to homeschool his children, who have aspirations of becoming Aggies.

"We have already started brainwashing," Grimaldo said. "They have taken several hours of the campus and enjoy playing with my ring, as well as going to football games, (hearing) the band, the yells, and they love Reveille."

Grimaldo is working on master's degree from A&M and will graduate in May, when said he hopes to then find a position in which he can apply new degree.

Working on his master's while working full time has been a struggle, but he said there is light at the end of the tunnel.

"After I graduate, the family is going to Disney World," he said. "We are going to experience it for the first time together and do it. I also want to open my own training and triathlete store."

puter was confiscated by the University Police Department and sent to the FBI's Child Exploitation Task Force office in Houston on Dec. 10, 2000. Johnston was asked last week to report to UPD offices, where he surrendered peacefully to the police.

Mark Bales, 23 of Palestine, allegedly operated a web site that provided access to child pornography and child erotica. FBI officials said Bales ran the site for two months starting Dec. 6, 2000.

Johnston, and the six other arrested men, allegedly subscribed to the site.

NEWS IN BRIEF

American dies of yellow fever

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A 47-year-old oil and gas executive traveling in Brazil is believed to be the third American in 78 years to die of yellow fever.

Tom McCullough, vice president of LMP petroleum in Corpus Christi, died March 18. Officials at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention confirmed Tuesday that yellow fever was the cause of death.
