another in Qalqilya, a military source said. The bodies of two Palestinian police were found in a park in the city's center, Palestinian military intelligence said.

Among the fugitives being hotly pursued by Israeli forces in Ramallah was Palestinian militia leader Marwan Barghout, a senior Israeli security source said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Israeli officials have said Barghout was involved in numerous deadly attacks on civilians.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, whom Israel blames for one of the worst waves of suicide bombings since the start of the conflict 18 months ago, was trapped in Ramallah headquarters for a fourth straight day, pinned down by Israeli troops and tanks within the walls of his compound.

President Bush called on Arafat to put a stop to anti-Israeli attacks. "There will never be peace so long as there is terror, and all of us must fight terror," Bush said.

Israeli soldiers set up more barricades in Ramallah's streets, turning cars already smashed by tanks onto their sides to form roadblocks. Pressing ahead with searches, Israeli soldiers broke down the Israeli troops and tanks executed more raids throughout the West Bank on Monday.

Israeli troops conducted door-to-door searches for Palestinian militants.

Tanks entered but pulled out later in the day; several nearby villages were occupied.

An 11-year-old Palestinian boy was killed by gunfire from Israeli soldiers.

Seven Palestinians suspected of collaborating with Israel were killed, Palestinian military officials said.

doors of homes in Ramallah and Qalqilya, Palestinians said.

"They smashed pictures that were on the wall and looked everywhere, emptying closets and throwing around our clothes," said 26-year-old Nafiza Rouf, who said soldiers spent about two hours in her Ramallah house.

Her 24-year-old brother Niad was made to kneel motionless while soldiers shouted questions and abused him, the family said.

Israeli military officials said the Operation "Protect the Wall" could be lengthy.

Perry

About 900 reservists at National Guardsmen have been processed through Fort Hood since the Sept. 11 attacks, officials said. About 650 remain at Fort Hood, the country's largest military post with about 42,000 soldiers.

Perry said the real story needs to be told is how much the reservists and national guard members have helped activity at Fort Hood.

Lt. Gen. B.B. Bell, commanding general of the III Corps at Fort Hood said the military could not do their job without the Guard members and reservists.

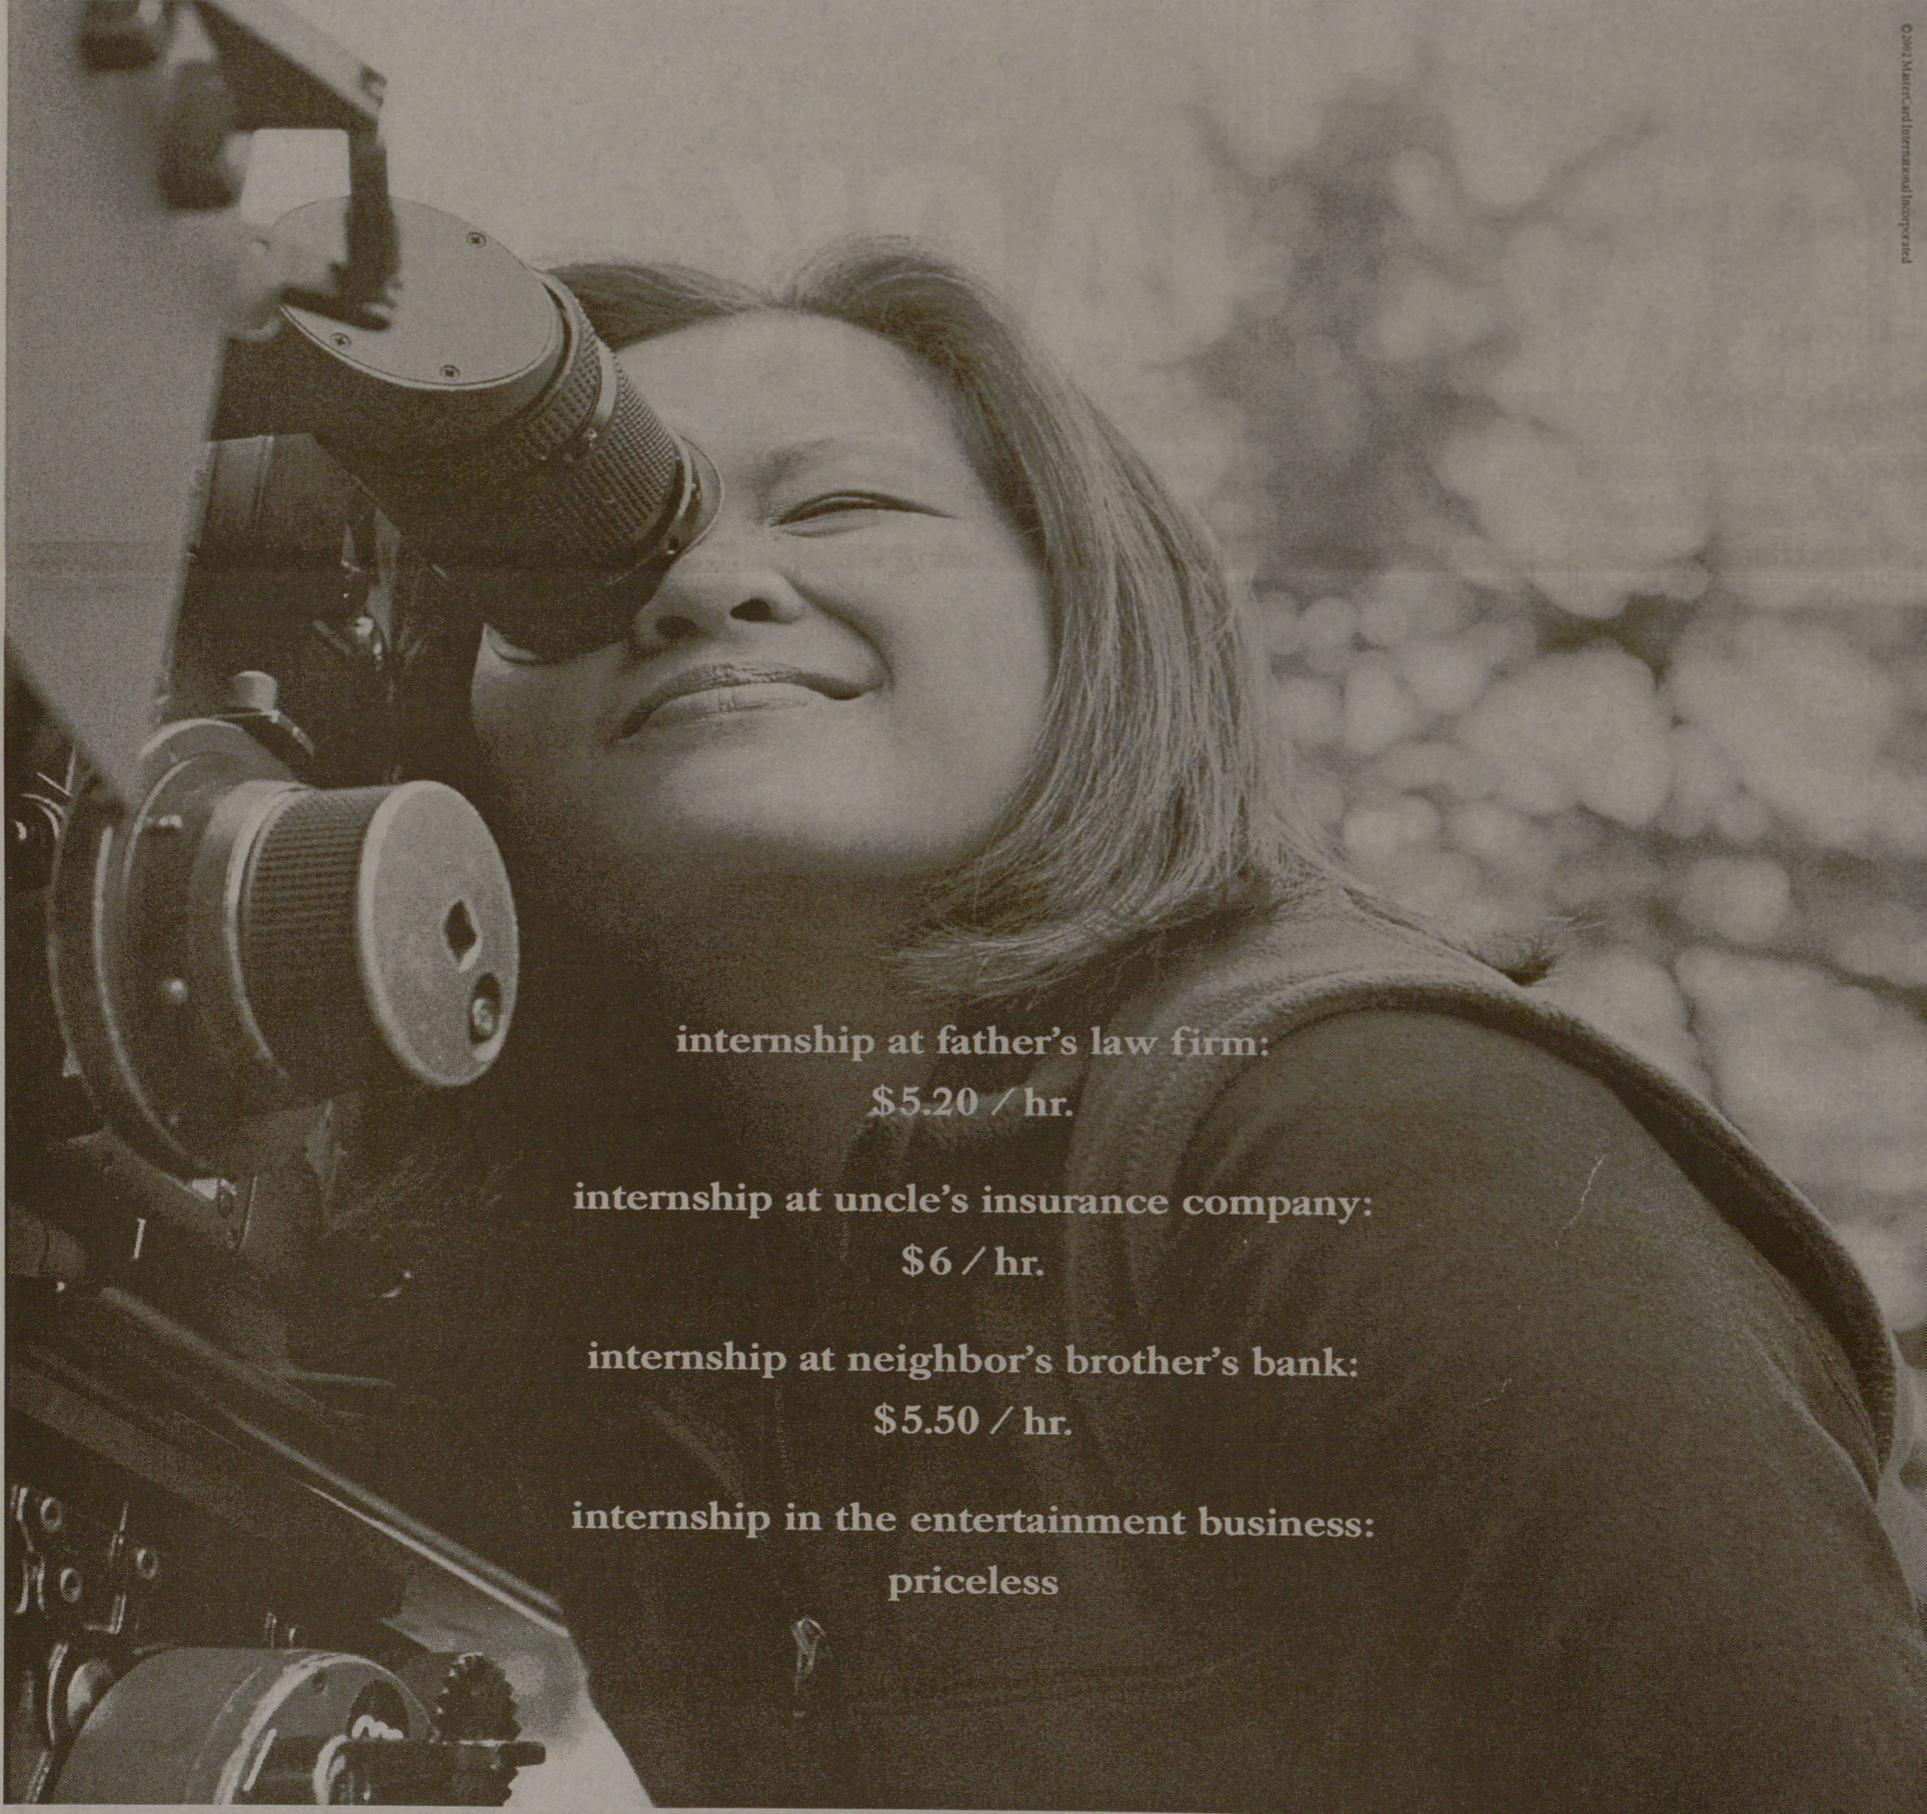

He said military officials do not say that life has not changed too much for them since Sept. 11. "I think it's changed for a bad guys," he said.

Before his speech, Perry was updated by Fort Hood officials on homeland security matters. Afterward, he shook hands and made small talk with some of the troops.

"You're an Aggie fan!" asked one soldier who said he was from College Station.

Perry attended Texas A&M University, where he was an animal science major, a member of the Corps of Cadets and a junior and senior yell leader before joining into the Air Force.

Most of the soldiers in the crowd were from Texas, but when Perry found one who was from New Jersey, Perry said, "You just wish you were from Texas."
