Starsailor to perform free show

By Lycia Shrum
THE BATTALION

It has been one year since New Musical Express magazine named Starsailor the best new band in Britain.

With its debut album Love is Here, Starsailor already had its first single "Good Souls" embraced in the United States. "Good Souls" was the song that helped Starsailor gain recognition in the states. Its unconventional release of "Fever" launched it to stardom in Britain.

Ben Byrne, drummer for Starsailor, said there was pressure on the band to get something released as soon as possible because of the band's increased recognition.

"We hadn't even written the album when 'Fever' was released," Byrne said. "The song was a demo we had recorded live from the year before."

"Fever" gained raves in Britain, and Byrne said that "Good Souls" was the next obvious choice.

"The reason 'Good Souls' was chosen for the first single in America was because it just had this sound about it," Byrne said. "It seems to have done really well so far."

Byrne said the next single lined up for release is one of the more upbeat songs on the album, "Poor Misguided Fool." Byrne said "Poor Misguided Fool" will fit more into the rock scene in America and appeal to more people.

Byrne said he definitely noticed a difference between Britain and the United States when it came to the band's music and when listening to it.

"It's kind of like an arrogant I.Q. to be people in Britain because they come and see the show and they stand back and say 'Go on. Impress us,'" Byrne said. "In America, the audience is a lot more overwhelming and more appreciative. Probably a bit more over the top as well, but we love it."

Not surprisingly, Starsailor has been linked to other British bands such as Coldplay and Travis. Byrne, along with James Walsh, vocals, James Stelfox, bass, and Barry Westhead, keyboard, have managed to keep their own identity despite of the comparisons to other bands.

"I think it's nice to be linked to those bands because it kind of gets other people interested like the fans of those bands," Byrne said. "They get interested in our music through those comparisons."

"Songwriting-based and melody-based, we're nothing like them," Byrne said. "I think we're a bit more melancholic, while Travis is kind of a little bit more uplifting because they sing about happy things."

For now, Starsailor continues to play its cards right in promoting Love Is Here. With its hectic touring schedule, including the MTV Campus Invasion, its continuous hit singles and eagerness and excitement surrounding the band, Starsailor continues to add fresh faces to the music scene.
