New York chemical explosion injures 50

NEW YORK (AP) — A explosion rocked a 10-story commercial building Thursday, spraying glass and rubble across a quiet block and injuring up to 50 people, authorities said.

"It was a giant boom — a real giant boom," said neighborhood resident Bill Beek, who lives a half-block away. "It sounded like an airplane crashing."

Several victims, at least three in serious condition, were taken to four Manhattan hospitals for treatment. One hospital, St. Vincent's, said it was treating eight patients, six of whom were critically injured. Other victims, bloody and bandaged, sat on curbs waiting for transportation.

A preliminary injury total stood at 50, said police spokesman Michael O'Looney. A tally of hospitals showed at least 20 people were taken to four of them; other people were treated at the scene.

Plumbers were working on the boiler in the commercial building at 121 W. 19th St. at the time of the 11:30 a.m. blast, but it was unclear if that was the cause of the explosion.

Windows along the block were blown out by the force of the blast, and several of the injured were hit by flying glass. The facade of the building was blown off; it was unclear how much of the building's interior had collapsed.

Scott Bonilla, a student at the nearby Apex Technical School, said he was inside the building when it began shaking.

"They told us to rush out of the building," he said. "There was like an explosion ... and I ran out of there."

Law enforcement officials said did not appear to be an act of terrorism.

"It was just a really loud noise," said Stuart Markowitz, who runs the technical school's education department. "Some of

USS Cole returns to Norfolk

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The USS Cole returned to its home port Thursday a stronger, better ship than when a terrorists' bomb ripped it open and killed 17 of its sailors a year and a half ago in Yemen.

The destroyer underwent $250 million of repairs over 14 months at Northrop Grumman's Ingalls shipyard in Pascagoula, Miss., then began the trip home to Norfolk Naval Station last week.

A steady rain fell as several hundred people waited under tents in a parking lot at the base. As the ship came into view, people began waving American flags and snapping pictures.

Ronald W. Francis drove five hours from home in North Carolina to honor the memory of his daughter, Lakeina Monique Francis, 19, an area management specialist who died in the bombing.

"My daughter is part of the ship. I want to visualize what she was doing on the ship," Francis said.

John Clodfelter, of Mechanicsville, Va., father of slain hull technician Kenneth Clodfelter, 22, went to Mississippi to see the ship depart and drove to Norfolk to see it dock.
