Midnight lights

A police crew (far right) directs traffic while workers resurface Texas Avenue near the Harvey Road intersection from midnight to 2 a.m. this weekend. The work limited Texas Avenue to two lanes while the workers laid down the new surface.

Popularity

in technology fields has not dropped enough to cause for concern.

He does agree that when the market takes a downturn, graduate school enrollment will usually rise, but A&M has not witnessed many of the trends suggested by the study done by gradschools.com.

Griffin also said that traditionally the department of electrical engineering is one of the top picks for a graduate program at A&M and there has been no obvious drop off in enrollment of that program or programs similar to it.

While the technology sector's maintain popularity, Dr. Rick Giardino, dean of graduate studies, said the MBA program at A&M has consistently been a popular degree.

Both Giardino and Griffin maintain that the numbers reported by gradschools.com may be skewed by the universities' graduate schools who sponsor advertise with the company. Despite the research that into this study, A&M upholds trends among enrollment in graduate programs and continues to be a leader in fields such as engineering, MBA programs and traditionally popular curriculum.
