is difficult to determine what elements this case may involve. "We look at the definition and see if it fits the criteria for the hazing offense," Keim said. If the DAs find evidence for a prosecutable case, they can either issue a warrant for arrest or prepare the case for a grand jury, he said. If the jury indicts any persons involved in the case, then it will be assigned to a court for further review. If a jury does not find the case usually ends, Keim said. He said anyone found guilty in a hazing case that does not involve bodily injury can face up to six months in a county jail and/or a $50,000 fine. If a hazing offense causes serious bodily injury, guilty persons can face up to one year in a county jail and a $4,000 fine. Keim said he has no recollection or information regarding A&M students prosecuted and found guilty for hazing in Brazos County in the past.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Air traffic controllers strike all around Europe

PARIS (AP) — Air traffic controllers went on strike Wednesday over a plan to unify Europe's disjointed skies, canceling 7,700 flights over France and stranding passengers across the continent just as the busy summer travel season was getting underway.

Apart from a full-day walkout in France, air traffic controllers observed less crippling work stoppages in Greece, Portugal, Italy, and Hungary to protest the 15-nation European Union's "single sky" plan. The continent-wide plan is aimed at reducing congestion and delays by bringing all air traffic controllers under centralized supervision. Europe's poorly organized airspace is a patchwork of different control zones managed by dozens of different air traffic control centers using different monitoring systems. But unions say centralized control will result in job losses, and that pressure to reduce costs could also result in a privatization of their services, thus increasing safety risks.
