"[After all five candidates interview on campus], Chancellor Howard D. Graves will forward his recommendations to the Board of Regents," Kellett said.

Howard will also be working with incoming University President Dr. Robert Gates and interim Provost David Prior.

The nine member Board of Regents will then vote on the finalists and make the final

A minority conditions report was also on the agenda at yesterday's meeting concerning the number of minority faculty and students at A&M.

The Senate returned the minority conditions report and recommendations on student and faculty minority conditions back to the subcommittee for further evaluation and amendment.

The report was not accepted by the Senate in its current form because of discrepancies in statistics and the wording of one of the recommendations.

Kellett said the next Regents meeting is scheduled for July 25-26. She said the search committee is not sure if the Regents will vote on the finalists during the July meeting because the schedule of interviews has not been finalized.

"The schedule of interviews will probably be announced tomorrow," she said. "So I am not sure if it will come up at the next meeting."
