Four women killed coming home from club near border

DONNA, Texas (AP) — Four women were shot to death in their car in an ambush near the Mexican border early Thursday as they drove home from the nightclub where they worked.

A fifth woman in the car was wounded and was hospitalized in guarded condition, and a sixth was found uninjured, hiding nearby, sheriff's Capt. Roy Quintanilha said.

"We don't know who was the target," he said. "We don't have a motive."

The women, employees at Garcia's Place, were apparently fired on after their sports car stopped to drop off one woman at the trailer where five of the women lived, he said. They had left the bar after it closed around midnight.

Vaccines ordered for workers at anthrax contamination sites

ATLANTA (AP) — Workers at buildings contaminated with anthrax should receive a vaccine, not just antibiotics, to protect them from the deadly agent, the government announced Thursday.

Federal health officials issued new guidelines specifically for anthrax cleanup cases, saying the existing rules for work in hazardous sites don't go far enough to protect those workers.

Protective suits and antibiotics are not enough, said Dr. Elena Page of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health.

The suits can fail, and it may not be healthy to use antibiotics for the long periods of time workers can spend on a cleanup job.

"They're not perfect," Page said of the previous rules. "We wanted a vaccine in place to give highest level of protection to the workers."

No cleanup workers in last fall's anthrax attacks caught the disease. Five people died after handling anthrax-tainted letters sent through the mail.

First major building destroyed 9/11 open

NEW YORK (AP) — The Winter Garden, a 10-story vaulted aluminum-and-glass atrium, reopened Thursday, becoming the first major building destroyed in the Sept. 11 attacks to come back to life.

Gov. George Pataki and Mayor Michael Bloomberg lauded workers for rebuilding the popular public space that was the centerpiece of the World Financial Center complex within the one-year deadline set by its owners.

"When you saw the magnitude of the devastation, this day seemed very distant," Pataki said. "The Winter Garden is a symbol of how New Yorkers are triumphing over this tragedy."

The reconstruction included replacing the metal framework and 2,000 panes of glass, bringing in 60,000 square feet of marble flooring and steps, and replacing 16 40-foot Florida palm trees.

The Winter Garden was across the street from the World Trade Center's twin skyscrapers. It was gutted by falling steel beams and other wreckage as the north tower collapsed.

The space will reopen to the public Sept. 17.

Mark Delavan, lead baritone of the New York City Opera, sang "America the Beautiful" to start the reopening ceremony Thursday. Bloomberg said the "ambitious goal of restoring this glorious public space ... has been realized in spectacular fashion."
