Trial set to start for man accused of stashing bodies

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The first two bodies were found crammed inside yellow metal barrels in a field in rural Kansas. Days later, three more missing women were found dead in 55-gallon drums at a storage locker 30 miles away in Missouri.

Authorities say John E. Robinson Sr., who owned the field and rented the locker, had trolled the Internet for sex under the name "slavemaster" and is responsible for both Kansas murders as well as four other killings, sexual assaults and the fraudulent adoption of the infant daughter of one of his victims.

That infant, now a teenager, was raised by Robinson's brother, who authorities say thought the adoption was legitimate.

On Monday, jury selections begins in Robinson's Kansas trial, and prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

Robinson, 58, is charged there with the deaths of Suzette Trouten and Izabela Lewicka, whose decomposing bodies were found in the field in 2000, and with the killing of the adopted child's mother, Lisa Stasi, whose body was never found.

Residents of the mobile home park where Robinson lived at the time of his arrest said they believed he was a good family man who enjoyed spending time with his grandchildren. He had been married for 37 years.

But prosecutors say Robinson was a con artist who lured women with promises of a good job and world travel, and who solicited sadomasochistic encounters in Internet chat rooms under the name, "slavemaster."

Two women who met Robinson at separate hotels later claimed they were sexually assaulted.

Robinson had forced some of his victims to write letters to family members telling them all was well, according to the prosecution's case. The correspondence eventually stopped, and the women disappeared.

Johnson County authorities began investigating after Trouten's parents said they hadn't heard from their daughter.

Train derailment releases sulfuric acid

FARRAGUT, Tenn. (AP) — Derailed railcars leaked billowing fumes of highly corrosive sulfuric acid in a residential area Sunday, forcing the evacuation of thousands of people.

No serious injuries were reported, said Alan Leedy, deputy director of the Knoxville-Knox County Emergency Management Agency.

Some people exposed to the acid fumes complained of minor skin and lung irritation and a few were taken to a hospital, where they were treated and released, Lt. Jeff Devlin of the Metro Special Hazards Team said.

Knox County Sheriff Tim Hutchison said the train derailed in the area, which includes more than 9,000 residents, could be expanded from three to four miles.

The train was traveling westbound on the Southern Railway when at least 20 cars derailed, including a tanker ruptured carrying about 93,000 pounds of sulfuric acid, Devlin said.

The acid, which was in liquid form, vaporized and released in to the air, creating a toxic cloud.

The gas continued to spew from the ruptured tanker Sunday evening, as crews prepared to neutralize the acid with a base substance. They first wanted to determine if there were other chemicals on the train and where, Devlin said.

The cause of the derailment was still unknown Sunday.

Firefighters, emergency management crews, the sheriff's department, the Red Cross and other agencies were assisting with the evacuation and cleanup.

Devlin said residents will have to stay away from their homes at least overnight. And half a dozen homes will be closed Monday in the Farragut and West Knoxville areas.

"All in all we feel we've got it well in hand," Devlin said.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Quadruple slaying suspect brought to court by ambulance

PORT CARBON, Pa. (AP) — A man accused of slaying his estranged wife, son and two friends before he took his own life was brought to court by ambulance for an arraignment.

Michael Harley Bechtel, 26, was arraigned Friday on four counts each of homicide and aggravated assault and one count of possessing instruments of crime.

He was wheeled into the courtroom on a gurney Sunday afternoon.

Bechtel allegedly went to his wife's home on Aug. 15, shooting the adults at the kitchen table and the couple's 3-year-old son, Jacob, in his bed before shooting himself in the head.

New York subway stations close after Sept. 11 are reopening

NEW YORK AP) — Three subway stations closed after debris from the collapsed World Trade Center towers filled their tunnels last Sept. 11 are reopening Sunday, a month ahead of schedule.

"Every day this great city comes back a little stronger and moves forward a little better," Mayor George Ptaki said outside the South Ferry No. 7 and No. 9 subway station.

In addition to the South Ferry station, the Cortlandt Street station on the No. 1 and No. 9 lines and the Cortlandt Streetstop on the N and R lines opened for the first time since last year.

The Cortlandt Street station on the No. 1 and No. 9 lines, which lies directly below the World Trade Center site, will remain closed until lower Manhattan redevelopment plans are finalized, said Larry Reilly, president of New York City Transit.
