Senate approves Sept. 11 investigative commission

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to create an independent commission to conduct a broad investigation into intelligence failures and other government missteps before the Sept. 11 attacks and recommend how to prevent future disasters.

"If we don't come to terms with the whole truth by looking back at what happened, we can never move forward with the knowledge and confidence we need to set things right," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., a chief sponsor along with Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

The Senate voted 90-8 to attach to the Department of Homeland Security bill an amendment authorizing the 10-member commission.

The bill has been stalled for weeks in a partisan dispute over worker rights. A new bipartisan proposal on the labor issues raised hopes that the stalemate on the homeland security bill might soon end, despite opposition from most Republicans and the president. Bush urged lawmakers after a Cabinet meeting to act quickly to create a department he can sign into law.

"There's still time to get a homeland security bill done, one which will ... give us the tools necessary to protect the homeland," Bush said.

The Sept. 11 commission idea, championed by many victims' families, became unstoppable when the Bush administration last week dropped its opposition. Although differences must be worked out with a House version and with the White House, it is clear that the commission will be created.

"We'll be fine. We're working with them," McCain said.

All the senators who voted against the commission are Republicans: Sens. Kit Bond, Missouri; Thad Cochran, Mississippi; Phil Gramm, Texas; Judd Gregg, New Hampshire; Trent Lott, Mississippi; Richard Lugar, Indiana; Craig Thomas, Wyoming; and George Voinovich, Ohio.

Not voting were Sens. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Max Baucus, D-Mont.

The Senate-created commission's probe would be broader than a House version which was limited to intelligence operations. The Senate panel would have authority to look into roles of law enforcement, commercial aviation, U.S. diplomacy, border control and immigration, along with intelligence.

An initial report would be due within six months, with a final report within a year, recommendations to prevent future attacks.
