

We're a leader.

Are you?

Leadership is what Grainger is all about. We welcome new challenges. We embrace change. And year after year, we set the standard for the world. That's why, over the counter and on the Internet, we're the biggest name in maintenance, repair, and operating supplies.

This is your chance to become part of one of our innovative programs that offers you the opportunity to determine your own career path, develop incredible hands-on experience and be an integral part of our success.

Sales and Branch Services Development Program

This 2-year rotational program offers you the chance to be a member of our branch and sales business team. You will work with our business' top managers and executives in Branch Services and Sales, as well as in the areas of Inventory, Logistics, Product Management, Catalog and Internet, to meet the demands of millions of customers and to deliver the solutions they need. To be eligible for this challenging program, you must have a Bachelor's degree, preferably in a business-related field, and possess demonstrated interpersonal and leadership qualities and excellent business acumen.

Become a Grainger expert. To find out more about our company, plan to attend our on-campus presentation on October 16th at 6:00 PM at the Memorial Student Center, Room 231. On-campus interviews will be held October 17th. Contact career services for specific locations.

For more information, please see the Campus Career Center Representative or contact Julie Pflomm, Staffing Specialist, at Julie_Pflomm@notes.grainger.com. To find out more about our company and our culture, visit our Web site at www.grainger.com.

Nobel winner lauded for holocaust writings

AP — After Auschwitz, to write poetry is barbaric, a philosopher once concluded. A long line of poets and novelists have thought otherwise, and on Thursday, the Nobel Prize in literature went to Imre Kertesz, a Hungarian novelist and Auschwitz survivor.

Honoring the 72-year-old Budapest Jew for his uncommon, single-minded gift for saying the unsayable, the Swedish Academy singled out his 1975 debut novel, "Sorstalansag" ("Fateless"), about a young man who is taken to a concentration camp but conforms and survives.

Kertesz was deported in 1944 to Auschwitz in Nazi-occupied Poland, then to the Buchenwald concentration camp in Germany, where he was liberated in 1945. Of the 6 million Jews killed in the Holocaust, some 600,000 were Hungarian.

Kertesz is the first Hungarian to win the award, worth about $1 million.

"My immediate reaction is one of great joy. It means very much to me," he told The Associated Press in Berlin, where he is on a teaching scholarship.

"There is no awareness of the Holocaust in Hungary. People have not faced up to the Holocaust. I hope that in the light of this recognition, they will face up to it more than until now," he added.

Since the end of World War II, writers and scholars have debated how to make art out of the Holocaust and whether they even can and should. "To write poetry after Auschwitz is barbaric," the philosopher Theodor Adorno wrote in 1949.

Kertesz was honored for writing "that upholds the fragile experience of the individual against the barbaric arbitrariness of history," in the citation by the Swedish Academy.

Wiesel, an Auschwitz survivor who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986, applauded the award.

"He is a great writer," Wiesel said. "His style and his approach are of such high quality that he deserved to be given the highest prize in literature."

"Fateless" and "Kaddish for a Child Not Born," his only novels available in English, are part of a trilogy on Holocaust themes.
