Bus driver falls prey to sniper's 13th attack

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A bus driver was shot to death Tuesday as he was about to set out on his morning route in what authorities fear was the 13th attack by the Washington-area sniper. Police also revealed a chilling warning found at a weekend shooting scene: "Your children are not safe anywhere at any time."

Conrad Johnson, 35, was fatally wounded just before 6 a.m. as he stood on the top step of his bus, setting off a police dragnet and snarling traffic in the suburbs north of the nation's capital. He died later at a hospital.

The shooting happened in Aspen Hill, the same community where the shootings began. Since Oct. 2, the sniper has killed nine people and critically wounded three others in Maryland, Virginia and Washington.

The slaying came after two days of public entreaties by police for the sniper to contact them.

Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Moose suggested Tuesday police had received a new message from the killer, and he said authorities were preparing a response. He refused to disclose details about the message, believed to be the fourth authorities have received during the investigation.

The warning about children's safety was discovered by police outside a steakhouse just north of Richmond, Va., where the sniper critically wounded a man Saturday night.

Moose said the warning came in the form of a "post-script," but refused to describe the rest of the note.

However, a senior law enforcement official speaking to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity said the note demanded $10 million.

More than 140,000 students in the Richmond area remained home Tuesday as schools were closed for a second day. School officials cited information from police in shutting down, prompting questions for Moose, whose office is leading the sprawling investigation. Moose said investigators rec-

AOL program to keep kids safe while surfing Internet

NEW YORK (AP) — America Online is launching a new Internet-safety campaign for kids built around an automated "buddy" that dispenses advice on the spot.

Kids can add "AOLSafetyBot" to their buddy lists of friends on AOL Instant Messenger. It is programmed to answer, within seconds, such questions as whether kids should agree to meetings with online acquaintances or reveal such personal information as their address and age.

Some experts wonder, however, whether a scripted program can work adequately in the online world, given the wide age range of computer users and their parents' different preferences.

The SafetyBot campaign is being launched Wednesday. People who do not use AOL's instant-messaging software can also find the SafetyBot buddy on AOL's SafetyClicks.com site.

Automated instant-messaging buddies, or bots, are not new, but past ones have been mostly devoted to marketing and promotions.

AOL's instant-messaging software is the most popular on the Internet, with more than 150 million registered users.

According to a 2000 study by Crimes Against Children Research Center at the University of New Hampshire, one in five youths ages 10 to 17 received unwanted sexual solicitations over the Internet within the year. Only a quarter of them told a parent.

Parry Aftab, a leading Internet-safety expert, applauded AOL's efforts to make learning about safety fun.

"The kids will play with it, and if they play with it, maybe they will learn something," said. But she cautioned that correct answers depend on age and other factors.

"There is not always one clear answer," she said.
