THE RICHARDS GROUP

www.7deadlysims.com

The Sims is one of the top rated computer games today. It allows users to control the lives of characters they create. The only limitations are those set in the game; this includes the items they have in their homes.

7 Deadly Sims gives users a way around that problem. The site offers free additions to the game in the form of objects that can be used in the creation of the characters homes. All of the objects are separated into seven categories, one for each of the seven deadly sins: lust, gluttony, sloth, pride, wrath, greed and envy.

Each category contains furniture, electronics, appliances, decorations, outdoors and various skins for the program. Once downloaded and placed in the correct folder, the items become available for use in the game.

Of all the Sims downloads sites, this one is one of the easiest to navigate and use. All objects are free for download, and the site is updated often.

If you're bored with your current Sims abilities, check this site out to spice up your possibilities in a very sinful way.

Ever searched for your name on the web? It's amusing what comes up, if you are willing to wade through the many sites that pop up.

Googlism does the job for you. Using google.com databases, the site allows visitors to quickly search for their own name, their friends names or anything else they come up with. The results of the search are given in a quick and humorous list telling what the web you searched for is.

For example, a search for Aggies, comes up with of jumbled jargon such as, "Aggies in they excel in the classroom" and "aggies yell practice."

The topics that can be searched for are endless. The layout of the site is clean and simple. It can be used easily by the slowest computer and the most novice of internet users.

It's an addictive site that will leave visitors searching and laughing for hours. The fun ends when you run out of things to look up.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Bush gets in trouble with First Lady

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush clearly adores his wife. But his efforts to put that admiration on public display do not always hit the mark. Warming up an audience in Charlotte, N.C., the president praised Laura Bush's performance as first lady and offered an explanation for her absence. "It's been raining," Bush said, "so she needs to sweep the porch" of their Texas ranch ahead of a visit by the president of China.

The comment apparently earned Bush no points with his wife. Mrs. Bush, standing with the president Friday on that very porch waiting for President Jiang Zemin, was asked if she appreciated it. She shook her head and mouthed, "No."

The president then passed the blame on to the press — which widely publicized the remark — for getting him in trouble at home.

Bush's joke last week got big laughs from his Southern Republican audience — so much so he repeated it at his two later speeches. But the remark — and other aspects of his standard refrain about his wife — hint for some at the bad old days of barefoot-and-pregnant references to women.

"It would have been funnier coming out of Bill Clinton's mouth than a George Bush, because we were all so aware of the work Hillary Clinton was doing," said Martha Burk, chair of the National Council of

Women's Organizations

When on the road — particularly in political settings — Bush nearly always gives his audiences an update on his popular wife.

Fans injured at Bow Wow's concert

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Several concert-goers suffered minor injuries Saturday night when a railing gave way at the Target Center during a performance by the rap artist Bow Wow.

BOW WOW

About 10 people were taken by ambulance for treatment, said Reid Katzung, director of operations. The most serious complaints appeared to be of lower leg pain and of back pain, he said.

Four people were being treated for minor injuries at Hennepin County Medical Center late Saturday, a nursing supervisor said.

The railing — about 12 feet long and 5 feet off the arena floor — gave way as fans pressed forward when Bow Wow worked his way into the crowd about 10 p.m., near the end of his show, Katzung said.

The railing snapped in three places, causing fans to fall forward, Katzung said. Bow Wow was not hurt and resumed his performance from the stage.

Repairs will be made and other railings inspected before the Minnesota Timberwolves'

NBA season-opener Wednesday

Katzung said.

Historians falsely accused of plagiarism

ATLANTA (AP) — An Oct. 2 Associated Press story about the resignation of Emory University professor Michael Bellesiles questions about his research book on the history of gun America mentioned three historians or academics caught up in controversies over their work.

The story misleadingly suggested that the three had been accused of academic fraud in a kind similar to that alleged against Bellesiles, who was named by an academic panel as "guilty of unprofessional and leading work" in his research. Bellesiles has denied the allegations.

In fact, the three others were accused of fraudulent research but of actions ranging from inadequate attribution of source material to plagiarism.

They are Doris Kearns Goodwin, who has acknowledged that in a book about the Kennedys she failed to provide adequate quotation marks for some passages taken from another author's work, although she cited the work as a source; the late Stephen Ambrose, who acknowledged that some sentences in his best seller The Blue were copied from another book about World War II bomber pilots; and SUNY Albany professor Louis W. Roberts, accused of plagiarizing more than 50 pages of Latin translations from other scholars.
