 need their laptop, a VPN card and a VPN account can be set up in the open lab inside of the West Campus Library, Williams said.
 Study rooms inside the Medical Sciences Library are hard wired for students with laptops and cables to use, he said.
 There are also 50 new ports available at Evans Library and the Library Annex. Students with laptops can use them in study rooms. The goal is to have Internet access throughout the library's library rooms, Gilroy said.
 No special accounts or are necessary for the use of these ports, Marti said.
 Students can go to the circulation desk at Evans Library to check out the laptops for four hours at a time during normal library hours, but laptops cannot be reserved or renewed at this time.

 along that he had special qualities."
 Despite the deep pass plays that burned the Sooner secondary, it was the rushing efforts of McNeal and senior Joe Weber that broke down the OU defense. The Oklahoma defense had to drop back into coverage in response to McNeal's scrambling ability. This allowed Weber running room up the middle behind a highly effective offensive line led by senior Taylor Whitley.
 Weber complemented McNeal's scrambling with 83 yards on 18 carries.
 "It opened up to where they weren't lining up against the running backs," Weber said. "They had to worry about Reggie keeping the ball and getting out of the pocket, and that definitely makes things wide open for us as running backs."
 Oklahoma began the scoring by marching down the field 55 yards on eight plays in its second drive of the game. Senior running back Quentin Griffin set the score up when he ran the ball 34 yards to the Aggie 10-yard line.

 Griffin caught a six-yard pass three plays later to put the Sooners up 7-0.
 Griffin rushed for 141 yards on 23 carries in the game. The Aggie defense has now given up 100 yards to a rusher in each of their last three games.
 The Aggies got on the board with McNeal's second drive with 8:25 left in the second quarter. McNeal hit Murphy along the right sideline. Murphy scampered the rest of the 61 yards unscathed for the touchdown.
 A&M closed out the half when McNeal threw a 40-yard touchdown pass off his back foot while being hit. The pass connected with senior tight end Greg Porter with seven seconds left in the first half.
 "I said I wanted to go after it (at the end of the first half)," Slocum said. "We were trying to be very aggressive in that situation."

 The Aggies opened the second half like they finished the first by going 71 yards on six plays. The drive ended when McNeal hit a wide-open Bethel Johnson in the end zone on a 17-yard fade route to put the Aggies ahead 20-13.
 Oklahoma stayed tight as freshman quarterback Trey DiCarlo hit four field goals in a day. The Sooners had the ball with 1:19 in the game, down 30-26, when senior quarterback Nate Hybl threw a pass intended for wide receiver Antwon Savage that was intercepted by Aggie safety Terrance Kiser for the win for the Aggies.
 "It's been one of those challenge years," Slocum said. "It's gratifying to go and play with the No. 1 team in a game where virtually no one gave us a chance to win. It is satisfying, this is pretty big."

World War II Memorial dedication set for Memorial Day weekend

WASHINGTON (AP) — World War II veterans learned Sunday they are about a year and a half away from seeing completion of their war memorial on the National Mall.
 The American Battle Monuments Commission announced Sunday the memorial will be dedicated on Saturday, May 29, 2004.
 "We really want to create what we call World War II week in Washington, D.C.," said Mike Conley, spokesman for the commission. "This could be one of the last great gatherings of World War II veterans in this country."
 The commission says that of the 16 million citizens who served in uniform in World War II, fewer than 4 million are expected to be alive when the memorial is dedicated, noting that veterans from that era are dying at a rate of 1,100 a day.

 A lengthy court battle was waged over the memorial's location and design, with opponents maintaining its large-scale design and location would spoil the character of the Mall and interfere with grand vistas long enjoyed by visitors.
 The 7.4-acre site is between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument. The white stone memorial will feature 56 17-foot-high pillars, two four-story arches and a sunken plaza with a pool. On the floor of the arches will be the World War II Victory Medal surrounded by the words "Victory on Land, Victory at Sea, Victory in the Air." A registry will contain the names of veterans and others who helped in the war effort.

 Construction began in September 2001 and is expected to end in March 2004. Conley said the commission chose the May date for the dedication because of the Memorial Day weekend and the prospect of nicer weather than in March.
 The commission hopes to organize several days of events honoring World War II veterans surrounding the dedication date, including a Smithsonian exhibition on the National Mall and a memorial service at the Washington National Mall.

 The dedication itself will include President Bush, other government dignitaries and actor Tom Hanks, who will be national spokesman for the project's fund-raising campaign, Conley said.
 Veterans are planning reunions in conjunction with the dedication, Conley said, and the commission wants to give them enough notice to make their arrangements.
 The total project costs are estimated at $170 million. Nearly $189 million has been raised through pledges and contributions, Conley said. An extra million will go toward programs related to the memorial.

Victim advocates, reformers pressure bishops on eve of meeting on sex abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day before America's Roman Catholic bishops meet to finalize their policy on sexually abusive priests, victim advocates and lay reformers gathered to pressure church leaders one last time before the debate begins.
 About 40 advocates — some weeping, others holding pictures of victims — stood across the street Sunday from the hotel where the bishops will assemble demanding the prelates take a more aggressive approach to ridding offenders from the priesthood.
 "We are undaunted," said Mark Serrano, a national board member of the Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests. "We will work every day and every night this week to speak to individual bishops."

The plan adopted this week will stand for at least two years if it wins Vatican approval and many prelates expect the completion of the policy will ease pressure for reform after a year of scandal.
 The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops had first approved a disciplinary plan when they last met five months ago in Dallas. The policy before them now is a revision they negotiated with the Vatican that is meant to address concerns about priests' rights and other issues.
 Bishops insist the new version maintains their commitment to removing all abusers from church work, but advocates argued the process will be too cumbersome and secretive.
 Their chance to win changes in the plan may be waning.

Victims and lay people had unprecedented access to church leaders at the Dallas gathering in June, holding private talks with cardinals and addressing the full meeting of bishops. No such discussions have been scheduled this week even though the Survivors Network said they requested a role.
 Since June, public attention has shifted, from a sole focus on helping victims to preserving priests' rights, prompted by criticism that the bishops' original plan violated due process under church law.
 The Survivors' Network discussed their criticism of the new plan Friday in a phone call with Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating, who the bishops chose to lead a National Review Board to ensure diocese are meeting the new disciplinary standards.
