'Monday Night Football' creator dies

NEW YORK (AP) - Roone Arledge, a pioneering television executive at ABC News and Sports responsible for creating shows from "Monday Night Football" to "Nightline," died Thursday, an ABC News spokesman said. He was 71.

Arledge died Thursday at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, said Jeffrey Schneider, an ABC News spokesman. No cause of death was immediately given.

Although he retired in 1998, Arledge's far-reaching influence can still be seen on TV all the time: when a slow-motion replay is shown at a sporting event, when Peter Jennings reads the news or when a sportscaster criticizes a player.

"Roone changed the face of television sports coverage with Wide World of Sports' in the early 1960s and the production of the Olympic games," said longtime broadcaster Jim McKay.

Arledge was single-handedly credited with bringing modern production techniques to sports coverage, then building ABC News into a power during the 1980s. For a decade, he was president of the sports and news divisions at ABC.

The 36-time Emmy winner was cited as one of the 100 most important Americans of the 20th century by Life magazine in 1990.

"Roone Arledge revolutionized television and with it the way people see and understand the world," ABC News President David Westin said in a statement. "He was our leader and our friend, and we will miss his passion and his will to make us all better than we were.'

Roone Pinckney Arledge was born July 8, 1931, and reared on Long Island. The Columbia College graduate joined ABC Sports as a producer in 1960 after a five-year stint at NBC. Appealing to his bosses to bring showbiz to sports, the 29year-old was given control of ABC's NCAA football broadcasts. Through the 1960s, he introduced innovations taken for granted today: slow-motion and freeze- frame views, instant replays, hand-held cameras and the placement of microphones to bring the sound of sports into living rooms.

TUTORS

In addition to all the technical innovations, McKay said Arledge would also be remembered for "putting the focus on the human being involved in sports.

In 1961, Arledge created "ABC's Wide World of Sports," one of the most popular sports series ever, and coined its tag line — "the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat."

Arledge, who became president of ABC Sports in 1968, supervised coverage of 10 Olympic Games from 1964 to 1988, including the memorable 1972 games in Munich disrupted by a terrorist attack in which a somber McKay delivered the news of the deaths of the Israeli athletes. Arledge expanded Olympics broadcasts beyond the competition by including personal profiles of athletes, a style echoed today since his protege, Dick Ebersol, runs NBC Sports.

He was the first to demand that networks, not sports leagues, approve announcers a philosophy that led to his hire of Howard Cosell, the abrasive New Yorker who was probably the most famous sportscaster ever.

"Monday Night Football," still a staple on ABC's primetime schedule, was brought to the air by Arledge in 1970.

When Sports Illustrated in 1994 selected 40 individuals with the greatest impact on sports over the previous 40 years, Arledge was third behind Muhammad Ali and Michael Jordan.

The reaction was harsh, though, when Arledge was selected in 1977 to resuscitate ABC's struggling news division — while still running sports.
