A walk in the clouds

College Station residents, Gerald and Shirley Woode, take a morning walk in the fog at Research Park Tuesday morning. The two take frequent morning walks at Research Park to relax and exercise. The morning fog cleared out by noon and a warm front blew in.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Autopsy photos shown in case of runover husband

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman on trial for fatally running over her philandering husband with a Mercedes-Benz burst into tears Tuesday when a prosecutor showed jurors graphic autopsy photos of his injuries.

Clara Harris, 44, wiped away tears throughout the day as a police detective testified he found a large patch of blood, bits of hair and grass on the undercarriage of the silver sedan.

But she began sobbing when prosecutor Mia Magness began asking a medical examiner about injuries depicted in the photos.

"We're not going to have any outbursts during testimony," District Judge Carol Davies said after Harris began crying uncontrollably, burying her head in her arms on the defense table.

Harris is charged with murder for the July 24 death of her orthodontist husband, 44-year-old David Harris, in a hotel parking lot.

Harris claims she accidentally drove over his wife that night. The woman's husband, who prosecutors say chose to fronted one another at the same hotel as the Harrises were married on Valentine's a decade earlier.

If convicted, Harris faces up to 20 years in prison. If jurors determine she acted under the legal definition of sudden passion, she could consider a lighter sentence of 10
