www.stereoscopy.com

There are those funny-looking red and blue glasses. There are the books full of images that become three-dimensional if looked at cross-eyed. And don't forget the View Master, the circa 1980s toy that allowed children to view slides of their favorite cartoon characters. They all exist due to the magic of stereoscopy (the act of seeing something in 3-D), which requires that a left-eye view and a right-eye view of an object be perceived from different angles.

Stereoscopy.com explains the science behind the apparent magic and even teaches visitors how to make their own stereoscopic images. The comprehensive Web site has links to other sites, a frequently-asked questions page, gallery and downloads. It gives recommendations on the best cameras to use when creating these special images and includes a forum to discuss stereoscopy with others interested in the art.

The site is updated regularly and is associated with others in the field of stereoscopy. The only downside to the site is that most links on the main page open a new browser window, and visitors may become frustrated.

Nonetheless, the site is fascinating. It's a place to learn a little bit about science and art at the same time.

youcantdrive.co.uk

With thousands on the highway at any given time, it's inevitable that anyone with a driver license has either experienced bad drivers or has unintentionally been one.

Darren Wragg has taken his frustration with bad drivers and built a Web site where he places all his complaints. For anyone who has had a bad experience or two on the road, youcantdrive.co.uk is the place to turn.

Through his commentary, Wragg lists drivers who he considers to be "useless drivers." Wragg also keeps a driving diary and gallery, where he places stories and images of bad drivers he encounters. Youcantdrive.co.uk is meant to be entertaining and bring a little levity to the frustrations that driving often causes. However, the site does not encourage others to instigate driving problems and contains a disclaimer which states that road rage is not endorsed.

Although youcantdrive.co.uk allows visitors to share their own driving experiences at the site's discussion forum, the site has not been updated in almost a year. However, humor is timeless, as are bad drivers. It's a fun site to get a chuckle or two.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Robinson to be nominated for Congressional Gold Medal

BOSTON (AP) — Jackie Robinson will be nominated for the Congressional Gold Medal in recognition of his achievements as the first black player in Major League Baseball, the Boston Red Sox said.

The announcement that the nomination will be filed this week in Congress came at a symposium Friday on what would have been Robinson's 84th birthday.

The Red Sox, the last big league team to integrate, gave Robinson a tryout but chose not to sign him. Robinson went on to break baseball's color barrier with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947.

"Jackie Robinson was more than a sports hero, he was an American hero. He transcended sports and helped transform the battle for civil rights," said Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., a co-sponsor of the nomination. "While we celebrate his birthday it is only appropriate that we honor this man who did so much to make our nation a better place to live for all our citizens."

Robinson, who died in 1972, was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1962. In 1997, baseball celebrated the 50th anniversary of his rookie season by retiring his No. 42 on all teams.

Since 1776, there have been approximately 300 recipients of Congressional Gold Medals, including George Washington, Joe Louis, Robert Frost, and Mother Teresa.

Judge eases comedian Poundstone's probation terms

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A judge has eased terms of probation for comedian Paula Poundstone, who in December regained full custody of three adopted children she lost after pleading no contest to child endangerment.

Superior Court Judge Bernard Kamins reduced Poundstone's psychological counseling sessions from four to two a month and her Alcoholics Anonymous meetings from three to two a week.

"Everything went really well," said Rich Pfeiffer, Poundstone's attorney.

Poundstone, 43, pleaded no contest in September 2001 to one felony count of child endangerment and misdemeanor infliction of injury on a child. The endangerment charge involved driving drunk with children in her car.

Poundstone was sentenced to 180 days at a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center, plus five years of probation.

Her children, ages 4 to 11, were placed with a court-approved foster parent, a friend of the comedian. Poundstone was allowed to monitor visits.

Musher battles chemotherapy trains for dog sled race

WILLOW, Alaska (AP) — Musher Debra Jonrowe is refusing to let a grueling course of chemotherapy keep her from taking another grueling course — the 2003 Iditarod dog sled race, which starts March 1.

Jonrowe, 49, was diagnosed with breast cancer in July and is recovering from treatment that sometimes left her so weak she couldn't close her hands.

"I was slapped completely flat," said Jonrowe, who has finished 19 Iditarod races. During last year's Iditarod, Jonrowe fell away from the leaders because of exhaustion. She finished 16th.

Jonrowe discovered a lump during a breast exam. By then, the cancer had spread to lymph nodes.

After undergoing a double mastectomy, Jonrowe began chemotherapy in mid-August. She continued to care for her 85 sled dogs with the help of her husband, Mike, and a handler, Kelly La Marre.

Now she is testing new sleds and eager to get back to racing.

"The Iditarod is my wellness," Jonrowe said. "It represents what I love and what God allowed me to do in my life."
