OKAY PEOPLE, THERE IS A SYSTEM TO WORKING ON GROUP PROJECTS!

IT'S IMPORTANT TO LEARN YOUR ROLE!

THERE'S ALWAYS "THE SMART ONE" WHO DOES MOST OF THE WORK.

THERE'S "THE SPAZ" WHO ANNOYS EVERYONE INTO STAYING ON SCHEDULE...

THERE'S "THE APATHETIC ONE" WHO DOES WHAT-EVER YOU TELL HIM, AND NOTHING MORE.

AND LASTLY THERE'S "THE SLACKER" WHO DOES NOTHING.

WILL YOU STOP WASTING THE GROUP'S TIME AND JUST TELL US WHO YOU ARE!!

WELL, I'M OBVIOUSLY NOT "THE SPAZ"...

of the Mexican-American culture. CAMAC is circulating a petition requesting that Vanity Fair run a feature on Mexican literature and philosophy because of the columnist's claim that "there's nothing in that language (Spanish) worth reading."

This is an issue of content and tone, Martin-Rodriguez said. Individuals should not stereotype an entire race of people, especially if they are not a member of that particular group, she said.

HEY RUSS, DARREN IS RECORDING HIS BASS TRACKS AND WANTS TO KNOW HOW TO HANDLE THEM.

FOR INSTANCE, DURING THE BRIDGE OF "ROCK YOUR FACE OFF," HE SUGGESTED A GENTLE CRESCENDO AND A DRUM FILL, BUT I THINK A DIP DOWN TO B MINOR WOULD REALLY WORK BETTER FOR THE MOOD.

Terrorism

"Universities tend to be very good targets," he said. "Just the nature of campuses make them wide open."

Kroll, Inc. typically analyzes three categories for colleges, including terrorism, environmental and location risks.

A few risks Maurer identified included elements such as ROTC programs, government funded research facilities and locations by railroad tracks.

Maurer stressed that not every risk could be identified, but every effort must be made to realize the major ones.

"The World Trade Center was probably one of the most secure buildings in the world," he said, "but it wasn't ready for an airplane slamming into the side of it."

Maurer said that every establishment, including universities, needs to have an

President John Casares said mistakes in The Battalion have been unacceptable.

"The Battalion needs to be more accurate," said Casares, a senior management major. "A lot of times things need to be double-checked."

Students said the Battalion staff has been unresponsive to suggestions and complaints.

One student said he made four phone calls to the Battalion that were never returned and wrote numerous letters that were not published.

"Do not assume your letters won't get published," said Liffick, a senior journalism major. "Don't assume your calls won't get returned."

Several students attending the forum said they were unhappy with the coverage their organizations' events had received from The Battalion.

Panelist Burke Wilson, Corps of Cadets public relations officer, said The Battalion focused too much on

Clarification

The student body president candidates listed March 4 in "Candidates jockey in SBP contest" are Kyle Carlton, chair of the Student Senate external affairs committee and Luke Cheatham, who led Unity Project's off-campus bonfire last fall. Also, Ed Brown will be listed on the ballot by his nickname "El Ramos."

negative issues.

"I want to know what positive things students are doing," said Wilson, a senior speech communications major. "There are positive things happening on campus, but they are never on the front page."

Battalion News Editor Rolando Garcia, a senior political science major, said The Battalion's goal was not to focus on negative issues, and focused on covering issues vital to the student body.

Battalion adviser Ron George suggested those unhappy with the newspaper apply to join the staff and fix the problems they see.

"Anyone can apply to work on The Battalion," George said.

Liffick responded to questions on the role the paper expects of staff to serve on campus.

"We want our staff to serve you," Liffick said. "Our main goal is to serve the student body."

George said the Battalion staff are not students' enemy.

"The reporters who work on The Battalion are your fellow students; they are not out to get you," George said.
