nents by a collective score of 45-3. "The home court in any sport is extremely important to protect," said A&M Head Coach Tim Cass. "We have a good home schedule and it is fun for us to play at home, it is something that they take great pride in."

The Tide started the season in impressive fashion, winning their first 11 matches, while climbing the national polls. Alabama topped out at No. 11 just before the end of February. Since then, things have slipped a bit as the men hit conference play. The Tide have dropped four of their first six conference matches, most recently losing at home against No. 6 Ole Miss. Despite the loss, Alabama is still held in high regard in the national polls. The losses initially dropped the Crimson Tide down as far as No. 19, but that was before the polls switched from a committee to the computer formula-based system which boosted the club back to

"Because of our challenging SEC and non-conference schedule we were able to move up. The only ranking that matters is the final one," Pate said.

The match comes at an excellent time for the Aggies, who have finally answered many of their lingering questions. After a bit of experimenting, Cass and the squad finally seem to have found a combination that works for them on the doubles point, moving senior Ryan Newport and sophomore Lester Cook back together at one, and moving sophomore Ante Matijevic to court three with junior Khaled El Dorry.
