While it's a bad pick-up line, the question of someone's sign is a valid curiosity to many people. There are many Web sites that strive to give accurate horoscopes and information about all the zodiac signs.

One such site is Astrology-online.com. It's run by Michael Thiessen, who has studied astrology for many years and is considered by some to be a master.

Available on Astrology-online is daily, weekly and monthly horoscopes for all 12 zodiac signs. Thiessen writes all the horoscopes for the Web site. These general horoscopes, as well as detailed information regarding expected personality traits and compatibility with other signs, are provided free of charge.

Thiessen does offer detailed, personalized, sign readings on an honor system. Unlike other sites where the user has to pay for the reading before receiving it, Astrology-online.com gives the reading first and then asks for payment.

The Web site is unique in the fact that it is personally run by the astrologer providing the readings. It is not as flashy and fancy as others, but it is easy to navigate and is filled with interesting information regarding what implication one's sign can have on his or her life.

However, the Web site also takes itself too seriously. Most astrology Web sites place clear notes to visitors that the site is intended for entertainment. This one, however, does not.

Nonetheless, Astrology-online.com is an interesting and entertaining Web site. It's an excellent place to look for information on astrology and be amused by predictions of the future.

The Internet has made the world a much smaller place. It is cheap and easy to talk to someone in another country. The largest hurdle friendships spanning continents has is the time difference.

Worldtimezone.com attempts to make it easier to keep up with what time it is anywhere in the world. The Web site features maps of time zones that span the entire world or specific countries. It gives information regarding where daylight savings time is and is not used. The Web site features maps showing where it is daylight and where it is dark. It even offers the times given in 12 hour format or 24 hour format. All of the information is accurate as of the exact time the Web site is loaded on any computer.

The Web site is an excellent tool for anyone looking for any information regarding time. It explains abbreviations for time zones and provides information regarding how the military keeps time. Just when everything seems to be explained, another link to more information can be found.

The only thing the Web site has against it is the use of so many advertisements. While the advertisements keep information provided free of charge, they also clutter up the page design. Some maps have to be scrolled across due to the ads taking up space.

However, the ads are worth the trouble, as Worldtimezone.com is an invaluable tool to anyone who may be traveling or who knows someone in another time zone.
