Senate

voting trends show Republicans should have more representation in the Texas congressional delegation.

Despite the committee's approval, it appeared the bill was headed for failure this session.

Eleven Senate Democrats and one Republican have said they are opposed to taking up redistricting. Under Senate rules, two-thirds of the chamber, or 21 senators, must support a bill for it to be debated. Opposition from 11 senators is enough to kill the bill in the 31-member chamber, and Republican Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst said he would leave that rule in place this session.

However, Republican Gov. Rick Perry is widely expected to call a second special legislative session on redistricting if a bill does not get approved by Tuesday, when this session ends.

If Perry does that, Dewhurst said he will do away with the two-thirds rule so that only a majority of senators would have to support the bill for it to get a debate on the floor.

Democrats say they are weighing their options, including boycotting the Senate, under that scenario.

Republicans tried to push redistricting during the regular legislative session but House Democrats fled the state in May.

That move broke a quorum in the chamber and killed the redistricting bill.

The map the committee approved keeps the Central Texas counties of Bell, Coryell and McLennan in one district; splits Webb County along the Texas-Mexico border into two districts; and divides Travis County into three districts.

One district starts in Travis County and winds its way south to Hidalgo County along the border. Another district, currently represented by Rep. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, starts in Travis County and heads east into Harris County.

Another Central Texas district starts in Bastrop County, snakes its way east to Aransas County and then makes it way south to Cameron County, also along the border.

The map also groups Victoria County into a district that includes Brazoria and Galveston Counties as well as part of Harris County.

Under the map, Rep. Martin Frost, D-Arlington, could likely lose his seat if he seeks re-election because he would be pitted against Republican Rep. Joe Barton of Ennis and the proposed district is majority Republican.

"It is an illegal map that violates the Voting Rights Act and disenfranchises independent rural voters, especially in East and Central Texas, and it's the result of a corrupt redistricting process that arrogantly ignores the wishes of the people of Texas," Frost said.

Other sets of congressional districts that would be paired in the same district include: Reps. George Green, D-Houston, and Mike Lampson, D-Baumont; Chris Bell, D-Houston, and Jeff Culberson, R-Houston; and Jim Carter, R-Round Rock, and Jim Turner, D-Crocket.

"Pairing" means forcing incumbents into the same district so that they would run against each other in a bid for re-election.

The plan keeps the cities of Lubbock and Midland in one district, a combination that could face opposition from the Texas House. Republican Speaker Tom Craddick wanted a congressional district based in his home city of Midland.

The House plan placed the two cities in different districts, but that map was met with criticism from Republican and Democratic senators.

Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, said the map the Senate committee approved hurts minority political participation.

Staples said the map would not be the final map the Legislature adopts and encouraged his colleagues to work with him.

"Come join us and make this a better map," Staples said. "Let's work together to develop a map that seeks to satisfy us all."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Two women dead, one injured in San Antonio office shooting

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man who authorities believe fatally shot two women and critically wounded another in a San Antonio real estate office Wednesday later killed himself during a pursuit near Temple, police said.

The man, who still hasn't been identified by police, was fleeing from officers in a black Ford Explorer when he shot himself, San Antonio Police Sgt. Gabe Trevino said. The vehicle ended up in a field.

"The license plate matches the vehicle that we were looking for," he said. "The description of the suspect also matches the description of the suspect we were looking for."

Trevino wouldn't release any of the names of those involved, but said all worked at a Century 21 real estate office in northeast San Antonio near Interstate 35.

"He walked in, approached these three employees, shot them, then ran," Trevino said. He said the victims were shot multiple times, but he couldn't say how many.

The wounded woman was taken by helicopter to University Hospital with a single gunshot wound.

"She's very critical," said Leni Kirkman, a hospital spokeswoman. "She's undergoing tests to determine the best course of treatment."

Relatives of the women were at the hospital to help identify the bodies, Kirkman said.

House rejects FCC media rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — House lawmakers voted Wednesday to block a new regulation that would allow individual companies to buy up television stations reaching nearly half the nation's viewers.

The provision, included in a spending bill approved 400-21, would roll back part of a Federal Communications Commission decision overhauling decades-old restrictions governing ownership of newspapers and television and radio stations. That June 2 ruling by the Republican-dominated FCC was a victory for media companies who sought relaxed rules.

Opponents are urging Congress to roll back all the changes, but the House measure only addresses TV station ownership.

The FCC voted to allow single companies to own TV stations reaching 45 percent of U.S. households. The House measure would return the cap to 35 percent. The fight now moves to the Senate.
