The Texas A&M Administration's vision of journalism is a vision that is not only outdated but also fundamentally flawed. It is a vision that seeks to control the flow of information and to suppress dissenting voices. This vision is rooted in a deep-seated fear of the power of the press and a desire to maintain the status quo.

The administration's vision is based on a narrow and self-serving definition of journalism. It is a vision that prioritizes the interests of the university over the interests of the public. It is a vision that seeks to silence critics and to protect the university from external scrutiny.

The administration's vision is also a vision that is out of touch with the realities of the modern media landscape. It is a vision that fails to recognize the power of the internet and social media to democratize information and to give a voice to the voiceless.
