dean of the College of Architecture. "Our campus is not as organized as some other campuses."

One of the main objectives of the plan is to bring West Campus together with the main campus. Barnes Gromatzky Kosarek Architects, located in Austin, is working with the University to plan construction for the campus. The firm has recommended building two additional underpasses and developing buildings closer to Wellborn Road to bring the campus together.

"We recommended a more dense campus and a more efficient use of campus land," said Carl Gromatzky, principal in Barnes Gromatzky Kosarek Architects. "The relationship between buildings and landscape is an important part of building a community."

A life science center is the only construction currently planned, Miller said. A plan for the construction of the center will be finished by the end of November and will cost around $100 million.

Miller said new guidelines for construction will make the campus more organized and create a more beautiful, more efficient campus for students and faculty. "The quality of buildings should be the primary concern," Regan said. "Guidelines in the master plan help locate places where the new buildings should be built."

Another part of the master plan states that buildings that are symbolic to the University should be protected at all costs. The historic core around the Academic Building will especially be preserved.

"The desire to have a new master plan was started before Dr. Gates became president," said Bill Perry, vice provost and chair of the Built Environment Council. "The plan was started over a year ago. We wanted to make it so that students can get to class easier."

the Centerpole route buses he rides to campus. Murphy said he currently leaves his bike on campus all the time. He rides the bus to and from school and rides his bike to classes.

Murphy said he would be worried about people getting impatient with him while loading his bike, although that wouldn't stop him from using it.

Weis said there have been no injuries to people or damage to bicycles so far.

"We hope that our customers continue to make sure the bike is properly mounted on the carrier and more importantly, make sure the driver is aware of their presence in front of the bus when loading or unloading a bike," Weis said.

Caswell said the Fish Camp route is ideal for bike racks because its users are too far away to bike to campus and its stops are mainly in neighborhoods, not busy streets.

He said other bus drivers agree that bike racks would be unnecessary and undesirable for on-campus routes.

Weis said if usage continues, TS will try to budget for additional carriers next year.

"This is a new concept to the area and we would like to further evaluate before making any purchasing decisions," Weis said. "Transit personnel will continue to monitor and report usage of the bike carriers so we can make an informed decision whether to add more or not."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Police investigate fatal roadside wreck

LULING, Texas (AP) — The Luling Police Department said it was continuing its investigation Sunday into an accident that killed one member of Luling High School's cross country team and injured three others who had stopped along a highway to pray.

Leo Morales, 14, died after being taken to Edgar B. Davis Hospital in Luling on Saturday morning. Justin Whitaker, 14, was in good condition Sunday after being taken by helicopter to Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, about 40 miles north of Luling. Two others — 15-year-old John Paredes and 17-year-old Dale Guzman — had minor injuries. They were treated and released from Brackenridge on Saturday night.

The students were among a group of 10 runners who had just completed a warm-up jog when the accident occurred about 7 a.m. Saturday.

They had stopped along the shoulder of U.S. 90 to pray, as they did before every practice run, when they were struck by a car traveling on the shoulder of the two-lane highway.

Guzman was thrown into the air after the hood of car hit him. He had time to say a few words of prayer before he heard someone yell, "Watch out!" and the sound of brakes screeching.

"I don't know who was driving ... but they must not have been paying attention, because it was daylight and they hit us," he said in Sunday editions of the Austin American-Statesman.
