"This will give the department of history the opportunity to publish more and to offer more diversity courses," Buenger said.

Buenger's research interests are focused in the South and Texas in the 19th and 20th centuries. His most recent book, "The Path of a Modern South: Northeast Texas between Reconstruction and the Great Depression," published in 2001, won the Coral H. Tullis Award for the best book on Texas history. He is also the author or co-author of four other books and the co-editor of another.

"Dr. Buenger is a very dedicated member of the history department," Rosenheim said. "I know he is committed to maintaining the department as one of its superb teachers, and also of dynamic and productive scholars."

Jason Godin, a second-year M.A. graduate student, said he is impressed with Buenger's efforts so far to improve the department.

"Dr. Buenger has done a fantastic job making the department become more efficient administratively," Godin said.

be expelled from the West Bank to the Gaza Strip. It issued similar expulsion orders for three more Palestinians on Wednesday. Human rights groups condemn the policy as a violation of international law.

Wednesday's bomb exploded around 10:15 a.m. (4:15 a.m. EDT) as the three-car convoy, escorted by Palestinian police, was heading south on Gaza's main road just after entering the Gaza Strip from Israel. In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Brooke Summers said the blast came from a "previously planted explosive device."

An AP reporter saw a gray wire with an on-off switch leading from the scene of the attack to a small concrete building at the side of the road.

After the first two cars went by, the third car had just passed when the blast went off near a gas station, said Mohammed Radwan, a Palestinian taxi driver who was at the station at the time. "The first two cars drove quickly and stopped far from the explosion. Palestinian security people jumped out of the car and rushed to the car that had blown up... I saw two people covered with blood lying next to the car," he said.

The blast gouged a deep crater into the unpaved stretch of road. The attack tore the van in half and flipped it over, leaving the wreckage twisted with the tires up in the air. The pavement was stained with blood and littered with bits of flesh that were collected by Palestinian paramedics.

Bass also cited the side effects of deferred adjudication.

"It's not a conviction, but people are still being punished," Bass said.

Freshman agribusness major Annette Cadena said she was surprised at the new law. Others, like Alicia Feagley, were supportive of the bill's effect.

"I think it's right," said Feagley, a sophomore political science major. "You do have the right to suppress your information."

Feagley compared the new law to the expunging of juvenile records.
