legislation that same meeting, but the bill was tabled for further discussion.

Student Body President and senior accounting major Matt Josefy said he has since signed the Open Access to Budget Bill into law. Students interested in the budget can now fill out a request form available through the sga.tamu.edu Web site. The budget information will then be sent to them as an Adobe Acrobat (.pdf) file, he said, to save costs on both sides.

Speaker of the Senate and junior philosophy major Matthew Wilkins has filed an "amicus curiae," or friend of the court brief, for the appeal case. Wilkins said in the brief that Teems has served as a senator in good standing and he would "regret the recall of a senator of his distinction." But, Wilkins said, an injunction by the judicial court to dismiss the recall would upset the delicate balance of power between the branches of the SGA by making a new law that is not created in the Senate, violates Court precedent, undermines Senate authority and creates the appearance of impropriety.

As an off-campus resident, Burden is one of Teems' constituents.

"I don't have any connection to Dustin (Teems)," she said. "It was something that interested me. I looked at (McCaig's) Web site (sgawatch.com) and didn't agree with what he was saying."

Burden said she agrees with Teems' position in the controversy and finds it to be representative of her beliefs.

"I do agree with the way that Senator Teems has spoken, with his idea that the budget shouldn't be displayed any other way than the way it is right now," she said. McCaig said he intends to seek an additional two days on the recall to make up for the time he has been forced to spend on putting together a case rather than collecting signatures.

"I'd like to deter people from using the judicial court to advance frivolous cases," he said.

The SGA constitution lists no requirements that students who wish to petition for a recall must meet to target specific senators. McCaig lives on campus and does not fall in Teems' constituency. However, he is allowed to file the petition, though he cannot sign it.

He has 10 class days to collect 300 signatures from off-campus students to make the recall election a reality. At that point, the vote would go to off-campus students who would have to vote to recall Teems by a 50 percent plus one vote.

McCaig said he has followed the letter of the law in this case, and his case will bear that out.

"I'm looking forward to exposing the ludicrous nature of this claim. It's nothing more than a baseless attack to stop the recall," he said. "They're basing it on stuff that doesn't exist."

Students who wish to sign the petition may contact McCaig at sgawatch@yahoo.com.

Robert Bisor, assistant vice president for administration, said the new software is in line with the Campus Master Plan because it will enhance services delivered to students, faculty and staff.

T2 has more than 200 customers and 45 employees that specialize in parking, software development and customer service for cities, universities and airports, according to its Web site.

Weis said he feels confident that now is the time for TS to go online. He said he hopes TS will serve as a leader to other A&M departments by showing them that being online is a simple and effective way to reach customers and students.

Festival

in MSC 212, 224, 225 and 226, AID will host its second annual food festival in hopes of raising funds for future social developmental projects in India.

AID aims to celebrate India's biggest festival, Diwali (Festival of Lights) with the A&M community, said Anu Agrawal, the coordinator of SWAAD.

Puneet Singla, vice president of AID, said opportunities to enjoy good Indian food are few and far between in Aggieland.

"We came up with the idea of conducting a food festival to provide a sample of the rich and diverse culinary traditions of India to the Bryan-College Station community, which would also help us raise money for a noble cause," Singla said.

The festival will encompass a variety of exotic Indian cuisine prepared by Indian students, as well as slides, pictures and display boards exhibiting Indian themes, including dances and costumes.

Prakash Krishnan, president of AID, said the University has been responsive to AID's programs and projects, and the Department of Multicultural Services and Student Activities, as well as some local businesses, have helped to fund SWAAD.

With the proceeds from SWAAD, the A&M chapter of AID hopes to support a current project in India that will hire doctors to train villagers in basic health care, including childbirth care and diseases, as well as health camps, Sengupta said.

In addition to the food festival, AID has ongoing fundraisers, including the HEB gift card program and the penny collection drive, both of which are easy ways for people to support AID activities, Singla said. The HEB gift card program generates up to $4 for every $100 spent at HEB, at no additional cost to the donor.

Admission to SWAAD is $8, which is good for eight coupons that can be exchanged for various food items, including entrees, desserts and breads. The event will be held from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.
