play against Arkansas. Now the two will finally be able to see each other on the same playing field once again, albeit on opposing sides. Once the opening kickoff takes place their friendship will be put aside like so many friendships across the state. For those 60 minutes on Friday, it's all business.

One of the two friends will leave Kyle Field with state bragging rights, and one will most likely take home Big 12 Freshman of the Year honors, but regardless of who gets what, Lewis and Young will still be calling each other two times a week to check up on each other.

"I talk to him a lot," Lewis said. "But when we step on the field it's all business. No friends, it's just a battlefield."

supported with the bill on final passage. "I know there are doubters out there. ... All I say to them is, give it a chance to work."

The complexity of the 681-page, $395 billion measure — and the two-year delay in implementing the new drug coverage — have made it subject to competing claims and uncertain estimates.

For seniors obtaining drug coverage through a stand-alone plan in 2006, for example, officials estimate a benefit with a $35 monthly premium and a $250 annual deductible, followed by 75 percent coverage up to $2,250 in costs. There would be a break in coverage over that level as costs reached $5,100 — a gap of $2,850 — before benefits resumed and began paying 95 percent of remaining costs.

But an official forecast by Congress' budget experts envisioned a steady increase in premiums and deductibles as well as a widening of the coverage gap in the following years, with insurance payments growing as well. By 2013, according to the estimates, the monthly premium would be $58, the deductible would reach $445 and the beneficiary would be required to pay all costs between $4,000 and $9,066 before coverage resumed.
