Red Sox to take on Buffet's Parrotheads in Fenway Park

BOSTON (AP) — First they hosted "The Boss." Now the owners of the Boston Red Sox are hoping for a siege of "Parrotheads" at Fenway Park. Team officials have applied to the city for entertainment licenses to stage Jimmy Buffet concerts on Sept. 10 and 12. It would be the second big act to play Fenway in a year after Bruce Springsteen's shows last summer, the first rock concerts in the venerable park's history. Mayor Thomas Menino, a Buffet fan, said there's no reason the show shouldn't go on, and said he wants to convert a neighborhood parking lot the Red Sox own into an all-day party spot for Parrotheads, as Buffet fans are called.

"They can come together and have their trailers and their parties, and they won't be on the streets," Menino said. "It will be 'Parrothead Village.'" Some neighbors who complained about noise and vandalism during Springsteen's two concerts were angry about the Buffet plans. "When we supported it last year, we supported it as a one-time special event," said Richardson, president of the Fenway Civic Association. "I don't think that Fenway Park is an appropriate place for a regular concert venue. It throws a kink into the whole stadium neighborhood dynamic." Councilor Michael P. Ross, who represents the Fenway and Kenmore neighborhoods, said steps must be taken to minimize traffic and noise. "The Red Sox tend to care about their reputation in the neighborhood," Ross said. "If it goes off perfectly, this could be something people are willing to consider in subsequent years." Red Sox senior vice president Larry Cancro said concerts at Fenway could be a year event.

"It's not the kind of thing we'd do every weekend; maybe we could do it once a year," Cancro said. "The majority of the people are going to be pleased and come out with a situation that's going to help the overall neighborhood feel good."

Maine officials hope newest King miniseries will attract tourists

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — Officials in Maine's second-largest city hope an upcoming Stephen King miniseries about a haunted hospital will bring an influx of tourists eager to visit the places portrayed in the show. "This is the type of publicity that the city could never afford to buy," Lewiston Mayor Lionel Guay said. "This is going to be national." The 15-hour "Kingdom Hospital," which begins Wednesday night on ABC, was shot in Vancouver, British Columbia, but is set in Lewiston. ABC has been promoting "Kingdom Hospital" for weeks; a book, "The Journals of Eleanor Druse," accompanies the series and is based on a character played by Diane Ladd. The network also has built a corporate-style Web site, www.kingdomhospitalofmaine.com, to represent the fictitious hospital. The narrative begins when a man is struck by a van on a rural road and taken to the Lewiston hospital for care. It's inspired by a Danish miniseries, "The Kingdom," by Lars von Trier. King adapted it, loosely basing some events on his own 1999 accident, in which a van struck him while he was walking along a roadside. Much of his recovery took place at Central Maine Medical Center in Lewiston.

Churches in Gibson's town hold services after 'Passion of The Christ' viewing

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Two churches in Mel Gibson's town held services beneath the big screen after seeing his new movie, "The Passion of the Christ." More than 400 members of Trinity Church and Stanwich Congregational Church crowded into a theater for a Sunday afternoon screening. A small white crucifix was set up beneath the movie screen. "After the film there will be a time of reflection," said Ian Cron, Trinity's senior pastor. "It will be a chance for us just to sit in the afterglow of the film, if you will." Gibson, who funded, directed and co-wrote the movie, lives in the Connecticut town. The movie, which depicts the crucifixion of Jesus, opened with $125.2 million in box office sales over five days. The total pushed "The Passion" past "The Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King" ($124.1 million) for biggest debut ever by a film opening on a Wednesday — Ash Wednesday, in this case. After the film in Greenwich, a guitarist and violinist played at the Rev. Neely Towe, pastor of Stanwich Congregational Church, blessed the Eucharist. "He was crushed by our iniquities," Towe said during the blessing. Several hundred parishioners came forward to receive the Eucharist, crowding the aisles and forming a line that stretched to the back of the theater. "It was an exquisitely crafted film but was also surrounded by a sense of the sacred," Cron said. "I think it was very powerful to see it as a community of faith."

Disney brings Narnia to the big screen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fresh off the Academy Awards success of "The Lord of the Rings," another fantasy epic is making its way from the page to the screen. Walt Disney Studios and Walden Media announced Monday they are co-financing "The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe," adapted from the second installment of C.S. Lewis' seven-book fantasy series. Directed by Andrew Adamson ("Shrek," "Shrek 2"), the live-action "Narnia" adaptation is scheduled for release around Christmas 2005. Future films in the series could follow. "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe" follows the adventures of four children transported to a magical land called Narnia. "The Chronicles of Narnia" were an important part of my childhood just as they are to millions of fans around the world," Adamson said. "I hope to bring to the screen a movie that is as real to the audience as Narnia was to me as a child."
