have fun in the sun or on the slopes that can cause emotional distress and physical reminders, like pregnancy or STDs that remain after spring break is over.

Shields said the Web site provides helpful guidelines to follow such as advising students to drink responsibly, stay in groups and abide by the laws.

If a minor attempts to purchase an alcoholic beverage, it is a Class C misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $500. In addition, the minor must enroll in an alcohol awareness class, perform eight to 12 hours of community service and have his driver's license suspended for 30 days.

Police say students need to take appropriate measures concerning safety before leaving town.

Lt. Mark Langwell, public information officer for the College Station Police Department, said students need to take time to make important preparations before they leave, such as checking flight information or road conditions.

"Being prepared for a road trip or flight can save time and headaches, not to mention your life," Langwell said.

Overall, Ford said she wants students to use good judgment while enjoying the break.

"Have a good time and relax, meet new people and enjoy the week away from school," Ford said. "Just watch out for yourself, your friends and your stuff and be aware of your surroundings."

environments, Soderberg said.

Andy Hernandez, a sophomore agricultural economics major, attended the conference to support Soderberg and help with the campaign. Hernandez, who is one of Soderberg's fraternity brothers, described Soderberg as outgoing.

"The key to getting a position like this is knowing everyone," Hernandez said. "Grant got to know lots of people."

In the three-day election process, it is very hard to get to know everyone, Hernandez said.

The campaign process involved convincing other schools in the region that he was the best choice, Soderberg said.

"It's all about the first impression you make," Hernandez said.

The job of the director is to learn how to motivate and improve Greek councils, Methony said.

One of Soderberg's goals is to increase the participation of Arkansas and Louisiana schools while putting A&M's association with Greek life at the national level.

"This will help put our name on the map," Hernandez said. "He'll get to meet people all over the country and talk to them about their Greek systems and make ours better."
