Diana exhibit debuts in United States

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A collection of Princess Diana's evening gowns, family photographs and childhood treasures will be featured in an exhibit that will debut in the United States here in October.

"Diana, a Celebration," which includes Diana's wedding gown, a diamond tiara and dramatic 25-inch train, will be on display at the Museum of Art Oct. 10 - Dec. 12. Presenters said they hoped the collection would provide context to her life as a glamorous humanitarian and offer a window into her connection with the public.

"She could have done the royal thing of just turning up cutting ribbons or whatever but she was never like that," said Diana's brother, Earl Spencer, who met with reporters Tuesday. "She wanted to do much more and to give of herself to people."

Photographs and home movies from their ancestral home of Antrim show Diana as a youngster, posing in her ballet shoes or diving into a swimming pool.

The exhibit offers 28 dresses, suits and gowns designed by Versace, Valentino and Chanel, including the light green protective vest Diana wore over denim during 1997 trips to Angola and Bosnia to fight land mines.

The display offers tributes that include her fatal Paris car crash in August 1997.
