sophomore Cliff Pennington and freshman Austin Boggs, who went three for five in the game. The four Aggies who saw action on the mound played well also, striking out a total of 13 Cougar batters, allowing two walks and giving up six hits, all of which were singles.

"We did a poor job with our starting pitching. We were basically overmatched on the mound tonight," Noble said. "Maybe we need to start bringing lighter bats, I guess, because we weren't very good tonight."

Houston posted their sole run in the seventh inning off of A&M reliever freshman Doug Frame. Frame would walk Houston sophomore Brett Logan to start the inning and then allow Logan to move to second base on a wild pitch. Logan later scored on a single to right field. "We're feeling pretty good right now," Johnson said. "We just have to keep believing and playing like we can and see what happens."

little mark in our 'L' column," Gregory said. "I think some major payback is in store for them." Coming up short in a 1-0 loss to Baylor on March 31 in Waco has been the only thing between A&M and perfection. A win Wednesday night would be the sweetest revenge of them all. The game is 6:30 Wednesday night at the Aggie Softball Field.

raped at the party by players or recruits; a third said she was assaulted in a dorm room shortly afterward. They are suing in federal court, seeking unspecified damages for what they say was the school's failure to rein in athletes and provide equal protection to women.

At least eight women since 1997 have accused Colorado football athletes of rape though no charges have been filed. Separate probes are under way by the state attorney general and university. Barnett's testimony was the most dramatic yet before the Board of Regents' nanel investigating Colorado uses sex and alcohol to entice recruits. The panel voted to ask for more time to complete its work, meaning a report wouldn't come out until the end of May. Barnett, occasionally raiswell as their behavior in the community. But he said there is only so much he can do. "I have 48 that I have held accountable over the last five years. I can't live their lives ing his voice, said he feels responsible for his players' performance on the field as for them," he said. Barnett was put on paid leave for comments he made about two of the alleged rape cases, including that of Katie Hnida, a former kicker who said she was raped by a teammate in 2000. He called her an "awful" player as he answered questions about why she left Colorado to later enroll at New Mexico. Barnett waded into the controversy again, telling the panel he spoke with Hnida's friends, former teammates and a rape counselor who spent time with the young woman, and that none heard her talk about harassment or assault.

"I couldn't find anybody to substantiate one single claim and I was looking to substantiate it," Barnett said. He repeated his belief that

Hnida wasn't a good player, but said he wanted her on the team to give her a chance of fulfilling her dream of playing college football. "I didn't care how awful

she was, I wanted her on the team," Barnett said. He said he hoped her presence would help his players learn more about women, and prompt them to behave.
