Stripes and polka dots are everywhere this season and swimsuits are no exception. Cally Blankenship (left), a senior finance major, loves her J.Crew swimsuit as much as she loves her roommate, Kelly Hicks, a senior sports management major, also in J.Crew.

sunglasses, designers are adding more ornamentation for their designs. Greg Bonnell of The London Free Press said he is offering basic rectangular sunglasses for men.

"To be able to sell a leather-wrapped temple with white stitching around the whole thing is pretty cool," said Mark Ginsburg of Mark Eyewear, as reported in the London Free Press. "They also classic men's aviators from Fendi with the entire frame wrapped in leather."

The hot sunglasses trend, other towns, do not easily apply in College Station. Morehead of Sunglass International in Post Oak said College Station is not considered one of the city's "fashion stores," which carry more designer brands.

"Hot trends in sunglasses right now are in brands like Versace and Chanel," Morehead said. "Rimless frames are popular, as well as larger frames and color-tinted frames."

Although rimless styles are still popular, bigger frames are basically taking over.

"For two, three years it's all and only about the three-piece rimless mounting technique," Ginsburg said. "The fashion-forward collection is not focusing as much on the styles as they are on the strong plastic collection."

Designer brands first hit stores in the 1970s, and the plastic frames were big hits.

"The style is revived in frames such as Athena by Oliver Peoples, offering the feeling of mystery and movie-star allure while showcasing retro style. Another to the disco era is the pop of white and natural colors season," said Michelle Moore of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.
