problems because students have many different lots to park.

"Lots and lots of people try to get into the Zachry lot," he said, "and it causes a lot of ill feelings, and now that lot won't be oversubscribed."

The plan proposed by TS last fall included faculty and staff parking changes. Gates put the plan on hold in January.

The Student Government Association officially endorsed the original plan, which included faculty and staff, but has not officially endorsed the revised plan, which only affects students, said

Logan Renfrow, Southside student senator.

The deans will discuss faculty and staff parking issues next, after the student plan is implemented, Newton said.

"Most of the faculty and staff parts of the proposed plan we can support," Newton said, "but there are parts of it that we are adamantly opposed to."

Newton said the main objection to the original parking plan by the deans was that they would lose control over parking spaces.

Newton said part of the proposed plan was that all non-reserved parking spots would be allocated by TS. Currently, zone administrators, or staff who work for department heads and deans, have control over some spots in faculty and staff lots.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Four killed in Illinois plant explosion
ILLIOPOLIS, Ill. (AP) — An explosion at a plastics manufacturing plant jolted this central Illinois town, killing four workers, critically injuring two others and forcing the evacuation of the entire community.

Six other workers suffered less serious injuries in the blast late Friday, which demolished 50 to 75 percent of the Formosa Plastics Plant and rattled the windows and walls of houses well over a mile away.

"I'm not a war veteran, but that is the loudest explosion I've ever heard in my life," said Illiopolis Mayor Allen Brickey, who lives less than two miles from the plant.
