Grant gets some color on newly designed $50 bill

By Jeannine Aversa THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Touches of red, blue and yellow are being added to the new $50 bill, the second of the greenbacks to be colorized as part of an effort to thwart counterfeiters.

The subtle colors, which appear in parts of what was once the cream-colored background on the note, are the most noticeable change on the new $50, which was unveiled Monday by the Treasury Department's Bureau of Engraving and Printing, makers of the nation's paper currency.

The new bills are still the same size and use the traditional black ink on the front and green ink on the back. They also still feature Ulysses S. Grant on the front and the U.S. Capitol on the back. But the borders around Grant — the Civil War general and 18th U.S. president — and the Capitol have been removed.

“Even with a new design, the world will still recognize the new notes as distinctly American,” said Treasury Secretary John Snow. “The new design is more secure than ever before. We believe it will be extremely effective in discouraging counterfeiters.”

The $20 bill — the most counterfeited note in the United States — was the first to get the color treatment, featuring splashes of peach, blue and yellow. The new $20 went into circulation last fall.

The new $50 features subtle background colors of red and blue on both sides. The stars and stripes of the U.S. flag are printed in blue and red behind the portrait of Grant on the front. A field of blue stars is located to the left of the portrait, while three red stripes are located to its right. A small metallic silver-blue star is located on the lower right side of Grant.

The redesigned $50 also includes tiny yellow number 50s scattered in the background on the back of the note. That's similar to the new $20, which has little yellow 20s on the back.

Security features include an embedded thread that glows yellow when exposed to an ultraviolet light; color-shifting ink that changes from copper to green when the note is tilted; watermarks visible when held up to light; and hard-to-replicate microprinting. In one spot, the tiny words “United States of America” appear on Grant's collar under his beard.

The bureau expects to print 76.8 million new $50s this year.

Grant gets color

The U.S. government continues its changes to U.S. currency — intended to thwart counterfeiting — with the announcement of a new look for the $50 bill. The new bills go into circulation in the fall.

Security thread

Watermark: a faint second image of Ulysses S. Grant

Color: Subtle background colors and blues, added
Color-shifting ink: the "50" changes from green to copper when the note is tilted

Microprinting: yellow "50s" scattered around the back of the note
