the conference what he is capable of. Gamble broke his ankle 10 days before the event, hampering last year's conference championship. Gamble still competed and was able to take home sixth place in the triple jump and eighth place in the long jump.

"We are going into this meet with a lot of confidence," Gamble said. "It is the most important meet of the season and we have so much on the line. We really want to win."

Gamble and the rest of the men's squad are looking to compete well enough to stave off Texas, Nebraska and Kansas State. Those three schools along with A&M are regarded as the top four men's squads in the conference.

Freshman distance runner Brian Duplechain is also excited about this weekend's event where he will run the 1,500 meters.

"I can't wait, this is what the whole season has come down to," Duplechain said. Duplechain is looking to improve on his fifth place finish at the Big 12 Indoor Conference Championships in the 1,000 meter event.

The track and field team returns home to College Station to host the All-Comers Meet on May 13 in a last-ditch effort for participants to qualify for the NCAA Midwest Regionals, also at A&M, on May 28.

THE BATTALION

Aggie baseball travels to Nebraska for three-game series with Cornhuskers

The No. 10 Texas A&M baseball team has more than just finals to worry about this weekend. The Aggies are traveling to Lincoln, Neb., for a three-game series with the University of Nebraska.

A&M (33-13, 9-8 Big 12) has to recover from a close non-conference 1-0 loss to Texas State Tuesday at Olsen Field.

Aggie sophomore outfielder Justin Ruggiano said the team is trying not to think of the loss.

"You don't want to be negative all week going into Nebraska," Ruggiano said. "It is a long season, and we are almost done right now but we just have to keep playing hard."

A&M head coach Mark Johnson said the loss won't slow down his team.

"If you spend all your time magnifying losses, you won't play well," Johnson said. "You move on and learn from your mistakes."

Johnson said the biggest changes will be made on offense, which only had three hits and no runs on Tuesday. Johnson said A&M may make changes in the batting order to jump-start the offense.

Johnson said Nebraska (29-12, 8-7) has been sliding recently, and he hopes to take advantage of that.

"We are playing a good ball club that hasn't played well in the past couple weeks," Johnson said. "We know they are good but you hope they don't come out of it until next week."

The Aggies are hitting a team average of .306, just slightly over Nebraska's average of .300. Sophomore shortstop Cliff Pennington is hitting .350, leading A&M, while freshman third baseman Austin Boggs follows Pennington with a .348 average.

Texas A&M sophomore outfielder John Infante congratulates sophomore shortstop Cliff Pennington after scoring against Houston in A&M's 8-1 win on April 13 at Olsen Field. A&M plays three games at Nebraska this weekend.

Johnson said he was happy with the pitching on Tuesday but hopes to work in more of his bullpen this weekend.

Nebraska's top batter, Alex Gordon, is a high .391 with Jake Mullinax at .362.

"(Against Texas State) in a 1-0 ballgame, the pitchers did pretty good," Johnson said. "We wanted to get Rumpy out there, and we wanted to get Pennington out there too. We got good pitching on Fridays and Saturdays. We just need someone to step up on Sundays."

A&M redshirt freshman pitcher Jason Meyer was named

Big 12 Pitcher of the Week last Tuesday after throwing his first complete game shutout last Friday in a 1-0 win over Missouri. His ERA is 1.27, and he has an 8-0 record. Senior pitcher Zach Jackson, the Saturday starter, has a 3.61 ERA with eight wins and three losses.

Nebraska's top two pitchers, Zach Kroenke and Phil Shirek both have ERAs near 3.00 with Kroenke tossing 2.55 and Shirek at 3.02. The rest of the Husker bullpen is over 4.00.

Johnson said his team is looking good going into the end of the season compared with other Big 12 teams.

"There are a lot of question marks for everybody," Johnson said.

Ruggiano said he is looking forward to the week off after the Nebraska game and said it will give the team time to regroup. He said they play better after exams when they don't have to worry about school.

"We will get our studying done and get that off our shoulders and go back out and concentrate on baseball for the rest of the season," Ruggiano said. "All you have to worry about is baseball."
