Supermarkets pull suspect candy

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — A chain of 13 supermarkets in the Rio Grande Valley is pulling all Mexican candy from its shelves after reports that similar candies in California contained high levels of lead, officials said Monday.

NEWS IN BRIEF

"We felt that we would best serve our customers by taking this seriously," Jaime Lopez of Lopez Supermarkets, Inc. said after a series of newspaper articles by the Orange County Register that appeared prominently in Valley newspapers last week.

Officials with the Texas Department of Health have collected Mexican candies from around the state for testing but don't expect results for several days.

The Register reported that more than 100 brands of candy sold in the United States had tested positive for dangerous lead levels over the past 10 years but were still on store shelves. Most of the dangerous candy came from Mexico.
