

AGGIELIFE

THE BATTALION

Page 3A • Friday, May 7, 2004

COAST TO COAST

Students heading for the beach or big city know what to wear.

RANDAL FORD • THE BATTALION

No, it's not Marissa and Seth from "The OC," but it is freshman biomedical science major Kate Furst and sophomore business major Patrick Turner. These two are Californians at heart with fashion creativity and a laid-back surfer attitude.

By Lauren Smith
THE BATTALION

There are the fans of "Friends" who refuse to refer to Joey as Matt LeBlanc and insist that the "Rachel" will never go out of style. Even though "Friends" is actually filmed in a studio in Los Angeles, television viewers start to think after a decade that everyone in New York City is not only attractive, but they also have enormous apartments with bank accounts to match.

big cities is by watching shows such as "Friends," "Sex and the City" and "The O.C.," viewers often develop a skewed view of fashion in the big cities. Moving from some place like College Station to Los Angeles will call for a few wardrobe adjustments, and looking to some of the new television stars could give the virgin to the big city some wardrobe inspiration.

Lauren Bishop of The Cincinnati Enquirer cited "The O.C." as one of the possible shows that can fill the style void that "Friends" will leave.

"Many say Marissa (Mischa Barton) on the 90210-esque soap is a huge fashion influence. She usually sports tiny tops, ruffled mini skirts and flats and has a penchant for Marc by Marc Jacobs and BCBG," Bishop said. "Brooding Ryan Atwood (Benjamin McKenzie) wears a T-shirt, jeans and an ever-present wrist cuff; Seth Cohen (Adam Brody) is a part skater boy, part prep."

The trend in short skirts becoming passe in the office began several years ago on "Ally McBeal," as the female lawyers often wore them around the office. Every woman on "The Apprentice" did her

See Coasts on page 4A

RANDAL FORD • THE BATTALION

Tommy Nelson, a business major and Furst are ready for the city in a New York minute. Today, shorter skirts and casual Fridays at the office are popular.

The Texas A&M Corps of Cadets

It's never too late to join the Corps of Cadets.

The Corps of Cadets has a 125 year tradition of developing leaders of character who are prepared to provide values based leadership in the public and private sector of society.

This tradition of developing successful leaders demands hard work, dedication and commitment to excellence.

It is never too late to join the Corps of Cadets. Josh Owen '06 joined the Corps after his first semester at A&M. He was recently selected for a leadership position on Brigade Staff for the 2004-2005 school year.

Take this opportunity to join the Corps and be a part of the leadership tradition at Aggieland.

For information on how you can join the Corps of Cadets contact:
Roger R. Martinez '85
 Assistant Director, Corps Recruiting
 (800) TAMU AGS
 E-Mail: rmartinez@Corps.tamu.edu