

NEWS IN BRIEF

Perry appointee has ties to waste company

AUSTIN (AP) — One Republican Gov. Rick Perry recent appointees to a advisory board on radioisotopes issues is a consultant to only company Texas officials expect to apply to run a level radioactive waste site in West Texas.

Lawrence R. Jacobi has been a consultant for Dallas-based Waste Control Specialists since January.

Rep. Lon Burnam, D-Worth, said Wednesday's appointment "is worse than fox guarding the chicken. People should be outraged. He's been appointed by the error to this committee. He's such a clear and obvious conflict of interest."

Jacobi is an engineer and former general manager of a defunct state agency in the of choosing a location for a level radioactive waste site, said he represents several companies and that Waste Control Specialists represents only a small fraction of his work.

Rain causing concern for Texas vineyard owners

AUSTIN (AP) — The heavy rain and lack of sunshine in Central Texas are causing concern among Hill Country grape growers.

If the rain doesn't clear, some farmers worry that they could lose all or a good portion of their crop.

"Rains have been wonderful for the country and it has never looked prettier but you guys need a little bit of drought and some sunlight," said Auler, owner of Fall Creek Vineyards in Tow. "I don't think it's a crisis yet, but I think getting close to one."

With rains come the threat of mildew and mold and insect. Because the fields are so wet, farmers cannot get into the yards to spray to ward off mildew, said Gary Gilstrap of Texas Hills Vineyard in Johnson City.

Plus, grapes need sunlight, ripen. They are getting ready change colors and are really now, Gilstrap said. If it continues, the grapes will break, he said.

TMA endorses funding for stem cell research

AUSTIN (AP) — The largest doctors group in President Bush's home state endorsed embryonic stem cell research and says federal funding should be restored for studies to combat disease.

The Texas Medical Association, the country's largest state physician organization with more than 30,000 members, recently adopted a resolution supporting embryonic and adult stem cell research and a process called "therapeutic cloning," but said it opposes cloning to produce a human child. The endorsement was publicized in the July 1 monthly magazine release Wednesday.

Federal help for embryonic stem cell research has been cut since 2001, when Bush signed an executive order preventing its expansion. Because the extraction of stem cells destroys day-old embryos, the process is opposed by groups who link it to abortion.

"There's a very strong belief these stem cells can offer a world of medicine a strategy for fighting chronically debilitating diseases," said Dr. Leonard Cigarroa, a family physician from Laredo who chairs TMA's council on scientific affairs. "The belief is that it can improve quality of life."

Stem cells are the building blocks. Scientists believe they can be coaxed to develop into specific cells that can be used to replace damaged tissue and treat conditions as diabetes and Parkinson's disease and spinal cord injuries.
