The monsters from two of the scariest film franchises ever battle each other on Earth in "Alien Vs. Predator"

This was the summer for Hollywood rivals to encounter each other after countless individual sequels. "Alien vs. Predator" has recently arrived in theaters and is trying to outshine "Freddy vs. Jason." Now audiences can finally experience America's two most grotesque extraterrestrial creatures in combat.

The human-breeding alien pods and the creatures with the dreadlocks and air masks are back on the big screen.

After meeting several of the human characters, the film's fairly cliché plot begins. Charles Weyland (Lance Henriksen) and his well-to-do company stumble across some interesting satellite readings that cannot be explained. Unfortunately, the readings come from Antarctica. Weyland, striving for an immortal name in history, proceeds to combine a "Jurassic Park"-meets-"Armageddon" plan that, at the time, appears flawless. After hiring two experts, Alexa Woods (Sanaa Lathan) and Sebastian de Rosa (Raoul Bova) and a special crew, the party travels through uncharted land to find Weyland's mysterious satellite findings. Alexa is known for her survival skills and is chosen to lead the group safely through the perilous journey of ice and snow.

Sebastian is the archeologist selected to come to help decipher and date any findings.

Once in Antarctica, all safety vanishes and chaos breaks loose. While the characters believe the search site is haunted by older ancestors, the reality is really that of the Aliens and Predators and that their long hiatus of peace is now over. Aliens and the Predators have always had a running battle between their species, and now man beings are added into the madness. It is up to take the understanding and befriending of these creatures before the humans can escape their lives.

Modern special effects and makeup designs make this movie enjoyable. Seeing the slime ooze from an Alien, and hearing acidic blood eat through metal was entertaining and impressive. The Predators were portrayed and designed to seem almost human except for their infrared eyesight, until they put their airtight mask and the audience could see they were as monstrous-looking as the Aliens. The sculptured alien head and its realistic complexion were amazing. The best feature is still the mouth that the aliens have inside their big mask.

However, several of the movie's scenes were flawed by dark and jerky camera work.

"Alien vs. Predator" is a basic action-movie that is great for a rainy day or a day when one's brain just does not want to function completely. Full of jumpy scenes, a tough Hollywood "Alien" and slimy creatures, this film is perfect for anyone who likes good old-fashioned action.
